WAR BREAKS OUT ON FORD'S SHIP

END ARGUMENTS IN THE NAN BATES SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Two pictures of Nan Carrigan Bates, newsgirl suing rich husband for divorce.

New Bedford, Dec. 12.—Nan Corrigan Bates, former newsstand girl in a New York hotel, who is seeking to divorce Frank Morton Bates, the Attleboro jewelry manufacturer, said at the close of the case today that she was going right back to New York.

The arguments in the case were finished, and Judge Sanderson took it under advisement at noon today. Mrs. Bates said as she left the court room:

"I suppose this is the tragedy of my life. But we all have our great troubles. This, I suppose, is mine. I was driven to it. I did all I could to reform him, before I was forced to give up the effort. I couldn't have stood it any longer. It would have killed me.

"I am going to Attleboro on the next train, and I will return to my work in New York tonight.

"My sister Marie is with me, and Miss Dolgan, who was one of the witnesses of my marriage."

Mrs. Haley on the witness stand today denied that she knew Bates used drugs before she married him.

"Mrs. Bates, did you hear Mr. Bates while on the stand say that before his marriage he told you he was using morphine?" Attorney Carey asked her. "I did hear him say that," she answered, "but he never told me anything of the kind. I did not know anything about it."

Q.—Did you hear Mrs. Clapp of Newark testify that in March, 1913, in conversation with you that you said you only married Mr. Bates for his money? A.—I did hear her testify to that, but I never told her anything of the kind. In fact, I never saw her before until she appeared on the stand at this trial.

Q.—Do you know Dr. Wood of Pawtucket? A.—Yes.

Q.—In regard to corrosive sublimate tablets, did you ever purchase any from Dr. Wood? A.—Never in my life.

The first part of the session today was consumed by Miss Hill, a maid in the employ of the Bates family for the past thirteen years.

TRY MRS. MOHR, WITH NEGROES, ON JAN. 11

Providence, Dec. 13.—After a stormy session Judge Edward J. Rathbun of the Superior Court today overruled five motions made by Attorney Arthur Cushing, counsel for Mrs. Elizabeth F. Mohr, and ordered that she and the three negroes be tried jointly on January 11 for the alleged murder of her husband, Dr. C. Franklin Mohr, on August 31.

Mr. Cushing argued in support of motions that another month be granted in which to prepare Mrs. Mohr's case; that Attorney-General Rice be ordered to elect to try Mrs. Mohr either under the statute or the common law; that she be granted a sep-

Court Enjoins Lynn Shoe Lasters' Union

Justice Pierce of the Supreme Court today issued an injunction enjoining the Lasters' Protective Union of Lynn from ordering further strikes or in any way violating an agreement entered into on August 1 between the manufacturers of Lynn and the United Shoe Workers of America. The agreement related to wages and hours of labor. Friday the lasters declared a strike through their business agent at the Watson Shoe Manufacturing Co., in which they are employed, and ordered a walkout. Saturday the strike was declared off.

Woman Victim in Mystery Shooting

Stamford, Ct., Dec. 13.—Miss Lydia Wesselink, about twenty-five and very pretty, is in the Stamford Hospital in a serious condition from pistol shot wounds inflicted yesterday afternoon at the Chick Inn Tearoom in Darien, of which she was proprietor. How the wounds were inflicted is not known.

Rantoul Denies Wife's Charges

SURPRISED AT GIFT TO WIFE

Edward L. Rantoul, who seeks the custody of his two children, today resumed the witness stand under re-direct examination and denied that his wife, Lois Burnett Rantoul, granddaughter of James Russell Lowell, had obtained his consent to accept rings or other presents from "Chippie" Rumrill, his millionaire college chum, for whom Mrs. Rantoul professed an "intellectual love."

Rantoul further denied that he ever threatened to tell his little daughters "what kind of a woman his wife was," or that he had ever "spit upon her."

"We went into the back library," added Mr. Rantoul. "Mrs. Rantoul became angry. She turned on me and spit directly into my face. I turned on my heel and went to my office."

This testimony followed the ending of Mrs. Rantoul's evidence today. Mrs. Rantoul was recalled for a few minutes. Mr. Rantoul's redirect testimony follows:

HELD HER BY WRIST.

Q.—Was there an incident in which you took her by the throat? Did you jerk her with any force? A.—No. Not at all.

Q.—What took place? A.—We were talking together and she would not listen. I took her by the wrist and held her. She did not struggle, and we continued talking for a minute or two and then she left the room.

Q.—Did you ever strike her with a key? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever throw a key at her? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever aim a key at her? A.—No.

Q.—Was there an incident where a

SPLIT OVER DEFENCE RESOLVE

By HELEN BULLITT LOWRY.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

On board S. S. Oscar II.—(By wireless via S. S. Noordam and Cape Race, N. F.)—Introduction of resolutions opposing American preparedness caused a split in the Ford peace expedition today. Efforts are being made to patch up the differences that arose, but it is possible that some of the delegates will leave the ship at the first opportunity after reaching Europe.

Eight members of the delegation refused to sign the resolutions. The insurgents are Governor L. B. Hanna of North Dakota, S. S. McClure, the editor; Herman Bernstein of New York, John D. Barry of San Francisco, Senator Helen Ring Robinson of Colorado, Judge Ben B. Lindsey, Lars P. Nelson of Denver and Mrs. Ben B. Lindsey.

Henry Ford signed the resolutions and defended them in the debate that followed their introduction, but said that the delegates who refused to accept them would nevertheless continue to be welcome guests on the expedition.

Mr. McClure protested bitterly against the resolutions, which, he said, conflicted with the invitation to the peace delegates. While he did not threaten to leave the party at the first chance, he asserted it was impossible for him to continue in cooperation with it.

Ellis O. Jones of New York, replying to Mr. McClure, sharply defended the resolutions, denied that they conflicted with the spirit of the invitations extended, and accused those failing to sign the resolutions of having neglected to study the invitations.

The resolutions were framed by a committee consisting of the Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones of Chicago, Rev. Charles F. Aked of San Francisco and several others. They asked that the resolutions be adopted as the platform of all the delegates.

Mr. Ford added his support to that of the members of the resolutions committee. He said that to have force the resolutions should be accepted by all. This failed to sway the insurgents, however.

The delegates frequently became acrimonious and ended only when the insurgents withdrew.

At a subsequent meeting of the insurgents they took under consideration the advisability of sending a wireless dispatch to President Wilson stating their position on preparedness. No decision was reached.

Ford by Wireless Asks Rulers to Order Truce

By International News Service.

New York, Dec. 13.—Henry Ford today sent by wireless from the peace ship Oscar II. the text of an appeal to the rulers of the belligerent countries of Europe to declare an immediate truce for peace negotiations. It follows:

"To His Majesty:

"Sire, we come in this time of trouble, not to add to your burdens, but to help lift them. We do not to consider which nations are most to blame for the disaster that has befallen Europe, but to end the strife; not to intrude ourselves upon your national life and national ideals, but rather with an earnest desire to understand them and a heartfelt wish to aid in realizing them.

"The love of country, for which every day thousands on thousands of lives are sacrificed, is the same in every land. Your nation, like the people of all the other belligerent countries, is fighting for its national existence and its best national traditions, and so there can be no irreconcilable differences. Such common ideals surely must afford a basis upon which to establish a magnanimous and honorable peace.

"The men and women of your country and of all the warring countries have proved their loyalty. Enough blood has been shed, enough agony endured and enough destruction wrought. The time has come to stop bloodshed, to save the people from further slaughter, and the civilization of the world from anarchy and ruin.

Has not war been tried enough? Sixteen months of fighting! Is it not proven that war cannot solve the problem, but that it leads only to loss and misery? Must more lives be crushed and wives and mothers bereaved before we recognize that Europe is bleeding to death and that the grievous wound must be staunched?

The rising desire of the people in neutral nations to convert a barren disinterestedness into active good will has prompted citizens of the United States of America to sail for Europe on the steamship Oscar II., with the serious purpose of joining with citizens of the European neutral nations in an organized effort to help restore peace upon an honorable and just basis; to facilitate direct negotiations between you and the other warring nations.

We neutrals are about to join in a conference which shall without delay frame and submit simultaneously to you and all the other belligerent nations proposals as a basis for discussion leading to the final settlement.

Therefore, we do earnestly entreat you and the rulers of all the other warring nations to declare a truce. Let the armies stand still where they are. Then let the negotiations proceed so that the soldiers may be delivered from another bitter Winter in the trenches and sent back to their labors and their firesides. As there is no other way to end the war except by mediation and discussion, why waste one more precious human life?

For the sake of humanity.

HENRY FORD.

Big War Death Toll in British Aristocracy

By International News Service.

London, Dec. 13.—War has levied a heavy death toll upon the British aristocracy. Changes in succession to more than 100 titles have already been caused.

According to the new issue of Debrett's Peerage just out there are 600 names of noblemen on the roll of honor of those who have been killed in action or died of wounds. The list contains the names of one member of the royal family, six peers, sixteen baronets, six knights, seven members of the House of Commons, 164 companions of various orders, 25 sons of peers, 83 sons of baronets and 84 sons of knights.

2 DIVISIONS WIPED OUT IN SERBIA

By International News Service.

London, Dec. 13.—According to a German official report, issued at Berlin today, two British divisions (40,000 men) were practically annihilated in the fighting that attended the allies' retreat from Serbia before the Bulgarian armies.

This bulletin was issued by the Berlin War Office.

"First German headquarters report that General Tedoroff's army occupied Doiran and Gevgheli. There are no more French or English troops now at liberty on Macedonian soil.

"Nearly two English divisions were annihilated in the combats that took place during the successful operations of our Bulgarian allies."

RUSSIA CLOSES FRONTIER.

A dispatch this evening from Salonica says that the landing of additional British forces began at dawn today and is still in progress. As fast as the troops disembark they are sent forward to reinforce the retreating allies.

A Central News dispatch from Athens says the entire Rumanian frontier.

"Telegraphing to his paper under date of Sunday, the Athens correspondent of Giornale D'Italia at Rome states that Greece has fully accepted the allies' demands with reference to Macedonia.

"The agreement that has been reached, he says, provides for an extension of the zone of operations allotted to the allies.

LANDING AT KAVALA.

This message may explain the reported landing of an Anglo-French expeditionary force at Kavala, eight miles east of Saloniki.

Greek troops concentrated at Saloniki after the allies landed there are being withdrawn, according to late reports from Athens. They have been ordered, it is said, neither to resist an invasion of Greek Macedonia nor to aid the allied forces retreating toward Saloniki.

Another Athens dispatch says:

"The political situation is normal again. The crisis between the Entente powers and Greece has been settled by the understanding that the allies will be given every facility for freedom of military movement in Macedonia.

"The allies modified their original demands for the withdrawal of all

Washington, Dec. 13.—Senator Kenyon of Iowa today introduced a resolution in the Senate for levying sufficient tax upon war munitions to pay the entire cost of the preparedness program.

ORTERIC, OF 6535 TONS, SENT TO BOTTOM

By International News Service.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 13.—The British steamer Orteric, a Bank liner of 6,535 tons, was sunk today by a submarine, it is announced here. The Orteric is said to have been on her way from Rio Janeiro to Liverpool.

The Orteric is the largest vessel that has recently been reported the victim of a submarine. The liner was built in 1911 at Glasgow and was owned by the Bank Line, Ltd. Four hundred and sixty feet long, the Orteric was 57 feet wide and 28.9 feet deep. Its home port was Glasgow.

It is not stated whether or not the Orteric carried passengers or whether or not any lives were lost.

DEMAND PROMPT REPLY FROM AUSTRIA ON ANCONA DEMANDS

Washington, Dec. 13.—The interest of the entire United States centred today in Vienna. On the declaration to be reached by the cabinet there depended whether this government should still maintain a position of neutrality toward all of the European belligerents.

With the making public of the Ancona protest, the first brusque document prepared by the United States since the outbreak of hostilities, official and diplomatic circles became aware that the mailed fist had been substituted for the soft hand in dealing with at least one of the belligerents. And the majority of the officials and chiefs of the diplomatic corps were admittedly gravely concerned over the outcome.

It is accepted that if the will of the Austrian people rules the government the demand for a repudiation of the Ancona sinking will be rejected promptly. But officials here point out that there is far more behind the question at this moment than a mere diplomatic break between the two countries. Were that so, which impends, official opinion, the withdrawal of the diplomatic representatives would be certain, but at the present moment the situation in the Balkans is more critical.

INFLUENCE IN BALKANS.

Greece and Rumania are trying to decide which way to jump. A diplomatic break between Austria and the United States, it is believed here, would have a strong influence upon both nations to side with the allies.

It is known that this fact is fully realized at Berlin and Vienna. And there are many officials who take the view that, if the Ancona crisis does base, it will be entirely due to the Balkan situation.

At the Austrian embassy here all comment on the note is withheld. It is stated that inasmuch as Vienna is familiar with the feeling in the United States no advice regarding how the crisis ought to be handled has been or will be sent from here.

The German embassy likewise was extremely reticent today. No official there would discuss the situation or venture a guess as to what the final outcome would be.

In this connection many officials saw in the sharp, brusque language of the Ancona note an implied answer to the suggestions that are now circulated in German circles that if the United States does not force Great Britain to concede the freedom of the seas she must resume her submarine warfare against all ships regardless of American interests.

With the precedent established in the Ancona note, this government must take a similar stand if Germany changes her present attitude of warning and search.

The few officials who still maintain a hopeful attitude today point out that if Austria desires to meet the wishes of the United States she can do so, inasmuch as she can never declared the Mediterranean a war zone. Vienna could take the position that the submarine commander exceeded his instructions in attacking an unarmed merchant ship and could characterize his act as "indefensible and illegal," and offer reparation.

Just how long a time will be given to Austria to decide upon her course of action is known only to President Wilson and Secretary Lansing. It is made very clear here that claims that the Austrian Admiralty is handicapped by the failure of the commander of the submarine to report will not be accepted as a valid excuse for a lengthy delay. Because communicating with Vienna is uncertain, taking from two to three days by way of Berne, Switzerland, the State Department will keep in touch with the situation through Ambassador Gerard at Berlin.

The next move is, of course, up to Vienna, but if Austria does not act speedily it is expected that Ambassador Penfield will be instructed to visit the Foreign Office and insist on an immediate reply to the United States note, as it is not the present intention of the administration to permit the existing crisis to drag along.

The United States demands:

"That the Imperial and Royal government denounce the sinking of the Ancona as an illegal and indefensible act that the officer who perpetrated the deed be punished.

"That reparation by the payment of an indemnity be made for the citizens of the United States who were killed or injured by the attack on the vessel.

"The United States takes the position that Austria had full knowledge of its views on submarine warfare, and therefore is forced to conclude either that the commander of the submarine acted in violation of instructions or that the Austrian government failed to instruct him to observe "the law of nations and the principles of humanity."

It prefers to believe that the commander acted without authority and contrary to instructions.

TEXT OF NOTE.

The following is the full text of the United States note to the government of Austria-Hungary:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

Washington, Dec. 6, 1915.

Please deliver a note to the minister of foreign affairs, textually as follows.

"Reliable information obtained from American and other survivors who were passengers on the steamship Ancona shows that on Nov. 7 a submarine flying the Austro-Hungarian flag fired a solid shot toward the steamship, that thereupon the Ancona attempted to escape, but being overhauled by the submarine she stopped; that after a brief period and before the crew and passengers were all able to take to the boats the submarine fired a number of shells at the vessel and finally torpedoed and sank her while there were yet many persons on board; and that by gunfire and foundering of the vessel a large number of persons lost their lives or were seriously injured, among them were citizens of the United States.

SHELLED AND SUNK.

"The public statement of the Austro-Hungarian admiralty has been brought to the attention of the government of the United States and received careful consideration. This statement substantially confirms the principal declaration of the survivors, as it admits that the Ancona after being shelled was torpedoed and sunk while persons were still on board.

"The Austro-Hungarian government has been advised through the correspondence which has passed between the United States and Germany of the attitude of the government of the United States as to the use of submarines in attacking vessels of commerce and the acquiescence of Germany in the attitude, with full knowledge on the part of the Austro-Hungarian government of the views of the government of the United States expressed in no uncertain terms to the ally of Austria-Hungary, the commander of the submarine which attacked the Ancona failed to put in a place of safety the crew and passengers of the vessel which they purposed to destroy because, it is presumed, of the impossibility of taking it into port as a prize of war.

"The government of the United States considers that the commander violated the principles of international law and of humanity by shelling and torpedoing the Ancona before the persons on on board had been put in a place of safety or even given sufficient time to leave the vessel. The conduct of the commander can only be characterized as wanton slaughter of defenseless non-combatants, since at the time when the vessel was shelled and torpedoed, she was not, it appears resisting or attempting to escape and no other reason is sufficient to excuse such an attack, not even the possibility of rescue.

"The government of the United States is forced, therefore, to conclude that either the commander of the submarine acted in violation of his instructions or that the Imperial and royal government failed to issue instructions to the commander of its submarines in accordance with the law of nations and the principles of humanity. The government of the United States is unwilling to believe the later alternative and to credit the Austro-Hungarian government with an intention to permit its submarines to destroy the lives of helpless men, women and children. It prefers to believe that the commander of the submarine committed this outrage without authority and contrary to the general or special instructions which he had received.

"As the good relations of the two countries must rest upon a common regard for law and humanity, the government of the United States cannot be expected to do otherwise than to demand that the imperial government denounce the sinking of the Ancona as an illegal and indefensible act; that the officer who perpetrated the deed be punished, and that reparation by the payment of an indemnity be made for the citizens of the United States who were killed or injured by the attack on the vessel.

"The government of the United States expects that the Austro-Hungarian government, appreciating the gravity of the case, will accede to its demands promptly; and it rests this expectation on the belief that the Austro-Hungarian government will not sanction or defend an act which is condemned by the world as inhuman and barbarous, which is abhorrent to all civilized nations, and which has caused the death of innocent American citizens.

CAROLINA IN PORT, TELLS OF SEIZURE

By International News Service.

New York, Dec. 13.—The arrest of the United States steamship Carolina, of the New York and Porto Rico line, by a French cruiser, was described on her arrival here today.

"It was about 4:50 o'clock on the afternoon of December 5 when the cruiser fired a shot across our bows as a warning to stop," said Captain J. O. Foss. "We had been stopped many times before, but that was the first time we were ever boarded. After the ship stopped, a French lieutenant came on board, apparently looking for Germans. There were many persons of German descent on board, but only one, Carl Schade, my chief steward, was taken off. I protested, but to no avail.

"The officer would not even make an explanation."

Other passengers said the stopping of the Carolina caused much excitement. Charles T. Plank, a New York business man, had a narrow escape from being seized. While he was being questioned by the French officer, his wife became hysterical.

REPORT BRITISH LOSE 40,000 IN BALKANS

Greek troops from Salonica, but only a small number of Hellenic soldiers will remain at the allies' base.

"The fifth corps of the Greek army has been withdrawn from the Doclan to the Salonica zone.

SEEK NEW GUARANTEES.

"The Greek government is now endeavoring to obtain guarantees that in no event shall Bulgarian troops invade Greece, only Teutonic troops entering Greek territory in pursuit of the retreating allies."

The Berlin War office today announce the capture in the Balkans of 500 more prisoners and 13 modern cannon, which had been buried by the Serbians. The following report from the German General Staff was issued.

"Balkan theatre of war—The army of General von Koevess took more than 500 prisoners yesterday. In Ipek were found 13 modern cannon, which had been buried by the Serbians. More than 5,000 Serbians, who had been cut off, have been arrested behind the German front during the last few days."

A quarter of a million Bulgarian and German soldiers are pounding away at the Anglo-French lines on the Greek frontier.

The battle is raging in a mountain snowstorm and heavy losses are being sustained on both sides. A Salonica dispatch to the Times says that the Bulgars lost 8,000 men in the attacks against the British position north of Lake Doclan.

Thousands of refugees from northern Greek-Macedonia are streaming toward Salonica. They declare that the fighting is so severe that the hospital corps of the allies cannot attend to all their wounded. They further declare that Gievgheli has been nearly destroyed by the bombardment of high German and Bulgarian guns.

TURK REINFORCEMENTS.

The Athens correspondent of the Morning Post reports that three divisions of Turkish troops have reinforced the Bulgaria-German forces east of the Vardar River to take part in the pursuit of the allies.

British headquarters in Macedonia admit that the allies have fallen back, the British alone losing at least 1,500 men. The Bulgarians are giving the allies no rest, but are attacking incessantly all along the front.

Steady progress for the Bulgarians is claimed by the Bulgarian War Office and the allies' losses are said to be enormous.

In the fighting between the Vardar River and Lake Doclan the Munster Fusileers, the Dublin Fusileers and the Connaught Rangers particularly distinguished themselves, covering the retreat of the main force.

Greece is upon the point of making a definite decision on the demands of the allies, according to Premier Skouloudis. There are strong indications that the most important demands of the Anglo-French governments will be met.

CHARGE PLOTTERS IN COURT ON SECOND CHARGE

By International News Service.

New York, Dec. 13.—Robert Fay, Walter Scholz, Engelbert Broneckhorst, Herbert Kienzle and Max Breitung, alleged German plotters, who were originally indicted on the charge of conspiring to blow up at sea ships carrying ammunition to the allies, were arraigned before Federal Judge Mayer today on a second indictment, charging conspiracy to commit murder. All entered pleas of not guilty.

All but Broneckhorst uttered the formal phrase, "Not guilty," when called upon. When it came Broneckhorst's turn, to make his declaration, he stood up and in thunderous tones, exclaimed: "Absolutely not guilty, your honor."

Providence Party Inspects the Pier

A delegation from the Providence city government visited Boston today and inspected Commonwealth Pier under escort of James T. MacDonald, terminal superintendent, and John A. Campbell, wharfinger. The visit was in connection with the proposed activities of the city of Providence in the development of its waterfront, and the visitors were particularly interested in freight handling facilities. After examination of Commonwealth Pier the party was taken by Assistant General Freight Agent George M. Wood to inspect the New Haven terminals.

Seek $200,000 for Fore River Work

Washington, Dec. 13.—Senator John W. Weeks will introduce a bill calling for the appropriation of $200,000 for the improvement of the Fore River at Weymouth. The city of Quincy and the Fore River Shipbuilding Company have agreed jointly to provide $100,000 for the river improvement, contingent on the appropriation being made by Congress of an additional $200,000.

Wellesley Church Threatened by Fire

A fire, believed to be of incendiary origin, destroyed a barn on Ledyard street, Wellesley Hills, and threatened St. John's Catholic Church, forty feet distant. Several houses were also endangered. When the firemen arrived sparks were being showered on the church and only with difficulty was the fire prevented from spreading.

South Boston Woman Kills Self and Baby

Mrs. Annie F. Sheasley and her eighteen-months-old daughter were found dead in bed in their home, No. 156 G street, South Boston, by relatives who traced the scent of escaping gas to the woman's room. It is believed the latter's mind was affected by brooding over the recent death of her mother. The woman leaves a six-year-old son, John, who was staying with her brother, John Sheasley, where she killed herself and baby.

REVOLUTIONARY BRIDE TO OMIT WORD 'OBEY'

Miss Olive Eastman, twenty-one, who today will become the first Revolutionary bride in Boston, declares that no woman of the progressive type will say "obey" and that any man of the thinking type wants her to say it is a relic of barbarism.

She will be married by the Rev. Gerhard Dehly at his residence at No. 4 Grafton street, Dorchester, this evening to Knut O. Svendsen, the Belmont artist, according to the rites of the Church of the Social Revolution, of which Bouck White is the founder.

"My marriage is to be one of love," declares Miss Eastman. "It is to be a union of permanency. My husband will have half of what he earns and I will have the other half.

"After my marriage I am going to work and my husband will co-operate with me in the home. We will both save for the rainy days. He will agree not to inform me that he is of the head of the family and I shall never try to boss him.

"If there are differences which we cannot settle by our own plan of mutual helpfulness then we will call in a third party to act as a board of arbitration.

"We do not love for mere beauty's sake. Beauty is an addition to the marriage tie, but not a necessity in our lives and ideals. Marriage must always be based on mutual attraction. This means that we must understand each other.

"Lovers' quarrels are born in making too much of little things. Marriage is for the future and is not even a present affair. Everything must be done in the present, with a long look into the future.

"For real happiness in the home life the wife must be a good cook and know how to keep a home tidy and clean.

"A wife should be able to give good, sensible advice to her husband and should never make it evident that she is giving information to her helpmate. She should be able to say what she has to say in a way that will make him think she is aiding him, not scolding.

"Both the husband and wife should always consider each other's pleasure. They should bear and forbear. The burden of the home life should be distributed upon husband and wife, not merely upon the wife.

"How many married women have to bear all the burdens of the home and how many husbands like to have them!

"A husband on coming into or leaving his home should give his wife an affectionate kiss. The home should be the dearest place on the earth but it should not be made of money. Marriage for money is the misery of many of our shattered romances.

"Our marriage is to make the home the light of our eyes. We will think together, plan together, bear our troubles together, cheer one another, get our pleasures in our own home, make others see that happiness springs from the home life when two human hearts are beating for each other's comfort and prosperity.

"Divorce must be avoided by every means, although I do not consider it wrong. A union of a couple should not be broken until every means to prevent a break has been tried and tested carefully.

"When I read of marriages in high life they seem to be unions of convenience. You see so many of these marriages finally end up in the courts that you at once begin to wonder at the reasons.

Rabbi Levi Pleads for the Armenians

An appeal for the Armenians who are undergoing persecution which race and religious hatred has visited upon them, was made by the Rev. Dr Harry Levi in his address on "Armenia" in the Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue.

Rabbi Levi estimated that 50,000 Armenians had been put to death and 500,000 rendered homeless or exiled, out of a population of 2,000,000. He said Germany is the only country in a position now to bring an end to the situation in Armenia.

OLIVE EASTMAN, BRIDE TONIGHT

3D WIFE DIES WHEN LEFT FOR SECOND

Claremont, N. H., Dec. 13.—After writing a note to her husband, in which she stated that "death would be a blessed relief," Mrs. Bernice Harlow, third wife of Dr. F. E. Harlow, ended her life by inhaling gas.

It is believed that she was grieving because her husband, whom she wedded three months ago, and who was suffering from a nervous ailment, had left her and returned to his second wife, Mrs. Lillian Harlow.

The suicide was discovered by Police Chief Elmer Cole, who had been summoned by neighbors, who smelled the escaping gas. He battered down the door and found the body, clothed in night clothes, lying on the floor. Eight burners of a gas stove were open.

The note, addressed to the husband, read:

"When you receive this I will be beyond all earthly help. I have suffered enough since you left me that death will be a blessed relief."

She went on to say that although she would not be with him in flesh her spirit would be with him. She closed by saying "God bless you, Bernice."

The couple were married three months ago. Two weeks ago Dr. Harlow appealed to his second wife to care for him in his illness. He has been at her home since that time, where she has been nursing him. The dead woman was the daughter of James Hawkins of Toronto.

RAIN OR SNOW STORM IS DUE HERE TONIGHT

A snow storm swept the Atlantic coast today. It was the first real snow fall of the season at many points.

It is the disturbance for which warnings were sent out by the government stations on Saturday. It is expected to reach Boston tonight, twenty-four hours late, in the form of rain or snow.

New York received today its first real touch of Winter. The low temperature of the past week was followed during the early morning by a brisk snowfall which turned to sleet and rain at dawn.

The storm was more violent in Washington, where three inches of snow fell. The northern part of Virginia was blanketed. Traffic and wire service was slightly impeded.

Philadelphia registered three inches of snow also.

The following storm warning was issued by the weather bureau at Washington:

"Northeast storm warnings, 18 m. m., Sandy Hook to Eastport. Storm off Middle Atlantic coast, moving northward. Increasing strong easterly winds, with snow this afternoon and tonight, shifting to west and northwest by Tuesday morning."

CURLEY ACCEPTS CHALLENGE TO TELL WHERE HE GOT IT'

So much was going on in Boston politics, on this day before the City Council ended, that the scramble resembled a circus with three rings, two platforms, several side-shows and a grand concert.

The Mayor's earliest contribution to the gingar of the day was in reply to the intimation from the Citizens' candidates and from Councilman John A. Coulthurst that the time had come when he should take his fellow citizens into his confidence and still the tongue of rumor by explaining "where he got it."

CURLEY STATEMENT.

Mr. Curley's story is that, within a year or so, he has expended some of his wealth as follows:

Jamaicaway land	$16,000
Adjoining lot	4,300
Cost of building, not more than	15,000
F. X. Rogers stuff	1,100
Total	$30,100

His Honor explains that he obtained the first $18,000 here referred to by selling his half-interest in the Daly Plumbing Company.

Then, four months ago yesterday, he recorded a mortgage of $15,000 on his land and the uncompleted building.

The position assumed today by the Citizens' candidates is that Otis S. Phillips, Frank Sebberlich, the secret meeting of the city employes, the attempted discharge of Election Officer Henry C. Church and the front at Tremont Temple rally at which Congressmen Tague and Gallivan and District Attorney Pelletier failed to appear—although they had been advertised as the stars of the night—have disposed of Mr. Curley's campaign to be the Grand Dictator of Boston to be Mayor and City Council at one and the same time, and that the Mayor has defeated his candidates by bagging the center of the stage and concealing his men from public view.

THE REAL WORRY.

Today, therefore, the Citizens' candidates are seeking to head off the Walter Baker with an "N" to it, who positively is not, and never was, that "Walter Baker of Dorchester, whose name is a household word throughout America."

It was being said openly today that the Mayor's chief worry is not Mr. Storrow, however he may attack Mr. Storrow in order to obtain the public sympathy of a sympathetic town, but the cold, cruel rumor that the friends of one John Francis Fitzgerald, and the friends of one David Ignatius Walsh will spend the day sharpening their long-bladed knives, and will march to the polls tomorrow looking for satisfaction.

Color is given to this report, in part, by the failure of Mr. Fitzgerald's newspaper, the Republic, to make its appearance last week.

In his excitement at Tremont Temple Saturday night, Mayor Curley charged that some years ago Mr. Storrow spent $40,000 through John F. O'Keefe, an advertising man, "buying up the editorial writers of Boston."

Major O'Keefe, although he knows Mr. Curley personally, today takes the trouble to deny this statement. Major O'Keefe says, in part:

NOT TRUE, SAYS O'KEEFE.

That statement is not true. Neither Mr. Storrow nor any candidate on the ticket with him is expending one cent through my agency or through me individually in this campaign. • • •

In the mayoralty campaign of 1909 I did handle the political advertising for Mr. Storrow, but, even in that campaign, he did not spend $40,000 for advertising, and what he did spend through me for advertising was expended for actual advertising space in the newspapers and for that alone. • • •

Any advertising agent who would take advertising on the basis that he could "buy up" the editorial writers of the Boston newspapers would be defrauding money under false pretenses. After a business experience of twenty-eight years with the Newspapers of the country I can state positively that in no city in the United States are the newspapers conducted on higher plane than those of Boston.

I dislike very much to have been drawn into this controversy. Experience has taught me to pay no attention to the wild statements made in the heat and excitement of a political campaign. When, however, the chief executive of a city like Boston makes a statement involving my name, such as is attributed to Mayor Curley in this instance, and it is printed and published broadcast in a reputable newspaper, I must, in justice to myself, to my business, and in fairness to all concerned, place the facts before the public that they may know the real situation.

THE REAL ISSUES.

At the closing hour of the campaign friends of good government and the citizen's movement caution the voters of Boston not to forget that:

The issue in tomorrow's elections is none of the things Mr. Curley has been getting excited about, but the plain, simple question whether the citizens of Boston want James M. Curley for Mayor and City Council at the same time.

Will the people of Boston vote to recall Curley in November and vote to give him his Curley Council in December? Is Curley to control a Council charged with the appropriation every year of at least $25,000,000 of the people's money?

Everybody "in the know" of Boston's politics is convinced that Mr. Curley will be satisfied if he can only get James J. Storrow out of the Council. Storrow as Councilman, with his knowledge of business and finance, embarrasses the ambitious Mr. Curley. Storrow is a bold individual who has no competition, standing differing with the Mayor publicly, telling the Mayor when he is wrong and quite generally asserting himself as a man of independence. Mr. Curley doesn't like that; and, if you want to please Curley tomorrow, vote for anybody else on the ticket but don't vote for Storrow.

And now let us hit only the high places of the Council contest and be free to take up other things.

Councilmen Attridge, Collins and Storrow and former Councilman Kenny will speak tonight in the Municipal Building in Ward 11, the district in which Mayor Curley grew to political power and which he is soon to leave.

NEWSBOYS TO PARADE.

Boston newsboys, among whom are some of Mr. Storrow's warmest admirers, will parade tonight in honor of the candidate Mayor Curley is most anxious to defeat. The newsboys' parade, it is said, will leave the Common at 7:30 o'clock.

Mayor Curley's campaigners appropriated the moving picture houses yesterday, and, it is said, took occasion to tell some of the theatre managers what a good friend City Hall can be to them; and vice versa.

In this paragraph is the nub of what might be a "regular" story if the campaign were not so nearly at an end.

Martin Lomasney addressed his Hendricks Club and the rooms in Court street and advised the support of the Curley ticket from top to bottom. Other speakers attacked Mr. Storrow because of his interest in the West End settlement houses and in social service generally. Martin is supposed to be further slicing of Boston Common. The Common grab, by the way, is likely to be beaten to a pulp.

Business Agent Thomas F. Shine of the Boston Carmen's Union estimates that Mr. Storrow will receive tomorrow the votes of 5,000 motormen, conductors and others belonging to that organization. Not more than half that number of city employes will be scared into supporting the Curley ticket by order of the Mayor.

HEWS WITH THE VOTERS.

Today's official statement of Messrs. Attridge, Collins, Storrow and Kenny says:

"The battle for decent government, an independent City Council and the political freedom of city employes draws to a close. If the good citizens of Boston will come to the polls on Tuesday, Mr. Curley will be beaten as overwhelmingly as he deserves to be."

There was no mention of family matters or private affairs in the Sunday newspaper queries of the Citizens' candidates concerning Mr. Curley's prosperity. The Mayor, who on many occasions has shown little sympathy for others, appeals for "sympathy." The Citizens' candidates, as a matter of fact, have been exceedingly tender and considerate in their treatment of Mr. Curley.

Those of the Mayor's own candidates who go down to defeat tomorrow will blame the Mayor for it. The official "Democratic party" circular, out today, is all Curley. The Mayor grabs the entire front page, half of which is occupied by one of his best photographs. "Too much Curley" will be the complaint on Wednesday by the losers.

Sailors of Wrecked Ship Land in Port

St. John's, N. F., Dec. 13.—The second officer and eleven men of the British steamer St. Kilda, wrecked off the island of Miquelon, were landed here today. The captain and remainder of the crew were still aboard the steamer when the second officer left.

Resinol Soap clears bad complexions

If you want a clear, fresh, glowing complexion, use Resinol Soap at least once a day. Work a warm, creamy lather of it well into the pores, then rinse the face with plenty of cold water.

It does not take many days of such regular care with Resinol Soap to show an improvement, because the Resinol medication soothes and refreshes the skin, while the pure soap, free of alkali, in cleansing it.

When the skin is in a very inflamed condition, with pimples, blackheads, redness or roughness, smear on just a little Resinol Ointment (or use it where minutes before using Resinol Soap.

Resinol Soap is not artificially colored in any sense, being entirely due to the Resinol medication it contains. Prescription cents at all druggists and dealers in toilet goods. For a trial size cake, write to Dept. 6-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Every City Employe Who Takes a Day Off Tomorrow Will Be Presumed to Do So in the Interest of Mr. Curley.

IN his speech at Tremont Temple, Saturday night, Mayor Curley climaxed the browbeating of the city employes when he said:

"The fight we are engaged in is a momentous one. I judge that some of you are city employes. It is to your interest to do whatever you can to bring success to the Curley candidates for the City Council and School Committee. Heads of departments cannot take oath, and be sure of staying out of prison, that any of you were at work if you are not Tuesday. I think it is your duty to yourself to take a day off at your own expense, and work at the polls. You cannot do less."

Mr. Curley knows that any city employe who takes a day off for political work on Tuesday will be presumed to do it for political work for himself. Mr. Curley does not employ the city men. He does not pay them. He did not give them their jobs originally. They are paid by that fifteen thousand majority who voted to recall Mayor Curley a month ago, who voted by that fifteen thousand majority that they did not want him to be Mayor any longer, and he would now be facing a recall if the recall provision were not a notorious fraud.

Every city employe who takes a day off will be presumed to do so in the interest of Mr. Curley. He will become immediately a marked man. Mr. Curley knows it. His job will be in danger so long as he is a city employe if he becomes an active political partisan. He is bound to lose his position the moment the other side gets control of the city.

Mr. Curley knows this, but he does not care. This is the crowning act of desperation, for no Mayor, fit to be at large, would attempt to do such a thing if he thought he could win without it.

The city men are really to be pitied. It is coming on Christmas season and a long Winter. They do not know which way to turn. They are intelligent enough to know that they are drifting upon dangerous rocks when they become active in politics. But some of them have a foolish fear that Mr. Curley would dare to remove them if they did not obey his orders.

The city employes may rest assured that there will be no wholesale removals by Mr. Curley because the city men have refused to do his bidding. It would cost Mr. Curley his job before the year was out, if he undertook such an un-American and indecent thing. The citizens of Boston would rise up and ask the Legislature to remove Mr. Curley, and every decent, right-thinking American in the city and State would join in the demand for his removal.

21 PAY FINES IN GAMING RAID

Twenty-one young men of Roxbury and Jamaica Plain, who were arrested in a Sunday raid on the charge of being present where gaming implements were found, on the third floor of a Tremont street building, were each fined $5 today by Judge Albert F. Hayden in Roxbury District Court.

Probation Officer Joseph H. Keene said he knew some of the men by sight and felt satisfied they had given fictitious names. Francis M. Costello represented them and paid to Court Officer W. C. Moore $105 as the county's toll.

A squad of patrolmen lay in ambush for twelve hours on the roof of a building before the raid.

Four young men caught shooting craps in the rear of No. 113 Cabot street by Patrolman John J. Sullivan were fined $5 each.

Meyer and Cole at Rotary Club.

George von L. Meyer, former Secretary of the Navy, and Adjutant-General Charles H. Cole will speak at the Rotary Club dinner at the Hotel Lenox tonight. They will discuss "Preparedness" from the naval and the military point of view.

STORROW TELLS MAYOR DEBATE IS USELESS

James J. Storrow today sent Mayor Curley a letter declining the Mayor's invitation to a joint debate on the issues of the campaign at Mechanics Hall tonight.

Mr. Storrow said he thought there was "little to be gained" by such a debate, and that he believed Mayor Curley would tomorrow receive "in no uncertain terms" the answer to his campaign. Mr. Storrow's reply read as follows:

I received a few minutes before 11 your challenge to a joint debate this evening.

In my opinion little is to be gained at the eleventh and one-half hour by such a debate.

The issue in this campaign is now perfectly clear.

It is your attempt, Mr. Mayor, to capture and dominate the City Council.

All the citizens now understand this perfectly. Tomorrow, in my opinion, you will receive the answer in no uncertain terms, that it is the wish of the great majority of the citizens of Boston that you should confine your efforts to being Mayor instead of trying to be both Mayor and City Council.

Yours truly,
JAMES J. STORROW.

CALL LAST-HOUR CIRCULAR NEW CURLEY TRICK

The following statement was issued today by John J. Attridge, Walter L. Collins, James J. Storrow and Thomas J. Kenny, Citizens' candidates for the City Council:

Mayor Curley, or at least some of those aiding and abetting him in this campaign, cannot allow the last twenty-four hours of the campaign to go by without one more political trick.

A circular has been received this morning by many thousands, and perhaps all Republicans in the city, signed by Walter N. Baker, the candidate who is attempting to turn the City Council over to Mayor Curley by running for the Council as an alleged Republican and so picking off voters from the Citizens' ticket—John J. Attridge, Walter L. Collins, James J. Storrow and Thomas J. Kenny.

Baker, over his signature as Walter N. Baker, Chemist, has himself in this circular in the following language:

"Fortunately there has been placed in nomination a candidate whose name is a household word throughout America—Walter Baker of Dorchester."

This attempt of the candidate himself to make voters believe that he is Walter Baker—name indeed familiar in every household—is a fraud.

Walter Baker, the celebrated manufacturer of chocolate, died in 1925, and since then there has been no Baker connected with the company in any way whatever, as appears from the statement published in this morning's papers by H. Clifford Gallagher, president of the Walter Baker Company.

Every Republican voter ought in the first place to resent this attempted deception. Every Republican to whom this deceptive circular has been mailed ought also to fully realize that a vote for Walter N. Baker, or his running mate, William Berwin, is a vote to turn the City Council over to James M. Curley, so that Mayor Curley may be in absolute control of the city government.

There are two vital issues for Boston at stake tomorrow.

1. Shall Boston retain its present non-partisan government or go back to the discredited party system which Mayor Curley is seeking to restore.

2. Shall Mayor Curley confine his efforts to being Mayor or be both Mayor and City Council.

Orville, Wash., Mob Attacks Japanese

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 13.—International issues may arise as the result of an attack made on two Japanese citizens who had opened a laundry in Orville. A mob is said to have wrecked the laundry, which had been opened despite the fact that the citizens of Orville had protested against it.

EXPECT A BIG LICENSE VOTE

A certain Mr. John Barleycorn is also being mentioned in the campaign.

Mr. Barleycorn's name is a "household word throughout America."

Major Dan Morgan Smith addressed a rally in Tremont Temple.

"Boston will go no-license," Major Smith said, "if all the voters who are against the saloon and the liquor traffic will come out and vote. We are not afraid of the vote of the average man, of the unions or the men controlled by the politicians, but we are afraid of the man who believes in a 'dry' Boston but who doesn't go to the polls to vote for it."

Edward D. Collins, once a member of the Governor's Council, spoke for "J. R." at the Superb Theatre, Roxbury Crossing. "I don't want Boston to go no-license," Mr. Collins said, "because I don't want to cut my feet on broken whiskey bottles. Under no-license Boston would be known as the 'Pocket Peddlers' Paradise.'"

On the other hand: "The havoc wrought by the European war is nothing compared with the ruin wrought in the American home by liquor and the liquor interests." This was said at a Faneuil Hall meeting by Mrs. Ella A. Gleason. Fifty children from the Frances E. Willard Settlement House participated in the exercises.

• • •

J. M. Prendergast, of the J. M. Prendergast Company, No. 87 Milk street, regrets the "prohibition craze," he says in a statement, "as hysteria," and looks with horror "on any prospect of going back to the days of no-license and kitchen barrooms."

The Chamber of Commerce and many business men have received no-license letters from Elizabeth Tilton, chairman of the poster campaign and director of the Unitarian Temperance Society. "The records show," Miss Tilton says, "even in large cities like Worcester, that making liquor less accessible, closing saloons, reduces all the things that we are fighting—poverty, crime, disease—gets the wages into the homes, raises bank deposits and transfers the men now in the liquor business to productive industries.

John M. Spillane, of the Old Colony Realty Association offers this: "Let us by all means continue our policy of a well regulated license system and not be influenced by rabid, selfish agitators and well-meaning but misguided individuals by making, at this time, a grave error, such as cost Haverhill, Worcester and other cities that experimented so dearly and destroyed their business and industrial equilibrium for years."

HE HAS SUFFERED SINCE LATE WAR

Oscar Clark of 83 Summer St., a Boston G. A. R. Man, Now Praising Plant Juice.

When one neglects their condition and they suffer from headache, backaches, dizziness, poor circulation, unsound sleep or constipation, it is well to remember that these symptoms of stomach trouble are bound to lead to more serious trouble. Give your stomach a chance to make good; help it so that you may again feel the feeling of real health; again have the vim, energy and vigor, clean tongue, sweet breath, good complexion, and be able to sleep the night through and to eat the food you crave without fear of the consequence. The new herbal system tonic, Plant Juice, will assist that much abused organ, the stomach, to accomplish these results.

Many local people are daily testifying that they have entirely regained their health by the use of this remedy. Mr. Oscar Clark, who resides at No. 83 Summer street, and is custodian of the G. A. R. Hall of this city, is a Plant Juice enthusiast. Recently he made the following signed statement:

"I contracted malarial fever during the war and I never got over it. I have had stomach trouble, which took the form of indigestion, liver and kidney trouble; was nervous and restless and could not sleep at night. My food would ferment in my stomach and cause gas and a bloated condition; had headaches and dizzy spells and would be so dizzy at times that I had to hang on to something to stand up. A friend told me about Plant Juice and I have been taking it for a month and am feeling fine. I can eat all kinds of food, have no more aches or pains, have no more trouble with my liver or kidneys. All my family are now taking Plant Juice and we are a very happy family now. Will recommend Plant Juice to any family."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Liggett Drug Co.'s store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

Poor Business Drives West End Man to Suicide

Harris Levine, forty-three, of No. 83 Allen street, West End, committed suicide today in the rear room of his store at No. 84 Spring street.

The body was found by Julius Margolis and William Wolf, who came in to make a purchase. Levine had closed all windows and doors and turned on the gas. The body was lying on the floor, face down.

According to the police Levine left the following note for his wife:

"Business is poor. I am sick and tired of all."

16 BAY STATE CITIES ELECT TOMORROW

While the effort of Mayor Curley to control the City Council of Boston is naturally the overshadowing feature of tomorrow's political program, there are sixteen other Massachusetts cities which likewise have their troubles.

Elections will take place tomorrow in Attleboro, Beverly, Chelsea, Chicopee Everett, Lawrence, Lynn, Malden, Medford, Melrose, Newmurryport, Newton, Revere, Somerville, Woburn and Worcester.

BOSTON UNDER LICENSE

Boston Licensees pay to the city of Boston each year about $2,000,000 in license fees, taxes on stock, water rates, etc.

Boston Licensees either own or are the occupants of real estate valued by the assessors at $110,000,000, from which an annual rental of $10,000,000 is derived.

Boston Licensees employ directly 16,000 persons, who, with families, aggregate 48,000. Boston Licensees pay in wages to various classes of employees about $15,000,000 annually.

Boston Licensees spend millions of dollars annually for supplies and work furnished by allied trades and contributing interests. Boston Licensees are favorable to and support the various branches of organized labor.

BOSTON UNDER NO-LICENSE

The tax rate of the city would be increased $2. on each $1000. of valuation, resulting in higher rents for all classes of homes and apartments, or it would be necessary to cut the appropriations for the various municipal departments in order to meet the loss of the larger license revenue.

There would unquestionably be a great deal of illegal selling of liquor, from which the city would derive no revenue.

Licensed dealers in other cities who pay no taxes and no revenue into this city would supply Boston's demand for liquors, so that the consumption of liquor would not be materially lessened.

The hotel business and the club life of the city would be virtually destroyed.

Boston has been a license city for thirty-three consecutive years, and has been under the "limited license" law since 1899. A "No" vote means practically UNLIMITED LICENSES and NO REVENUE.

No-license, WHENEVER and WHEREVER tried in large New England cities situated as is Boston, has been an absolute failure from a moral as well as an economic standpoint, and cities which have EXPERIMENTED with this idea have returned to the license system with a net gain for "YES" as high as 100%.

RANTOUL DENIES HE APPROVED GIFT TO WIFE

bookcase figured at Elmwood which has been testified to here? A.—Yes. We were discussing the lease for the house for the Summer. I told her that I understood that under the circumstances she would not want to go to Beverly Farms and live with my family. I told her that if she would spend the Summer with me I would go to any place within reason. She gave me an evasive answer and I took her by the wrist. There were glass doors in the bookcase and they would have been easily broken if I had exerted any force.

Q.—Did you take both your wrists? A.—No, only one.

Q.—Did you ever call her a filthy woman? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever say she was in the gutter? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever say you would keep her there? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever say that she would be in the gutter? A.—Yes.

ADMITTED LOVE FOR RUMRILL.

Q.—What did you tell her then? A.—I told her that if she kept on the way she was going that she would be in the gutter.

Q.—Did you ever say that you would put the children from her? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever consent to her receiving earrings from Rumrill? A.—I didn't know about them.

Q.—Did you ever tell her to go to New York and stay a few weeks with Mr. Rumrill? A.—No.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I did say that if she did go to New York with Mr. Rumrill that she would be glad to come back and stay with her children.

GIVES SECRET TESTIMONY.

At this point Rantoul was called to the bench to give secret testimony to Judge McIntire, while Mrs. Rantoul remained in her seat. The conference at the bench continued twenty minutes and Rantoul resumed the stand and continued his testimony.

Q.—How long were you engaged to Mrs. Rantoul? A.—About seventeen months.

Q.—Did you ever talk to Dr. Folsom about the condition of your wife? A.—Twice.

Q.—Did you ever refuse to eat with her? A.—Twice. I did not eat with her, but I would not say that I refused.

Q.—Did you ever have a talk with Miss Huntington about your wife? A.—Yes, at North Haven. I do not remember in whose house it was.

Q.—Give us the substance of this talk? A.—She said: "Is it not a pity that Lois is getting herself talked about this way?" I answered that I did not know that people were talking, but said that Mrs. Rantoul had neglected me a good deal, but I thought that it would all blow over. I said I had known Rumrill for a great many years. We were good friends and did not believe he would bite me in the back.

Q.—Is that all? A.—No, she told the conversation she had had with Mrs. Rantoul when she said to Mrs. Rantoul "You ought not to carry on that way with Mr. Rumrill."

Beggar's Average Said to Be $1 an Hour

John Rollins, charged with seeking alms in the Boylston street subway, test the best job he ever had when he was arrested by Officer Huckins of Division 4 according to the testimony of the police officer. Huckins declared in court that Rollins told him that he averaged a dollar an hour from the crowd. Rollins was found guilty and sentenced to a month in the House of Correction.

Family Driven Out by Morning Fire

The family of Angus McDonald of No. 725 Centre street, Jamaica Plain, had to flee from their home clad in their night clothing early today when a fire was discovered on the second floor. It was with much difficulty that the family reached the street. The cause is unknown.

DUMBA'S AIDE MAY ALSO BE RECALLED

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
International News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Dec. 13.—Belief that Baron Zwiedinek, the Austrian charge d'affaires in this country, is slated to follow Dr. Dumba, his predecessor, whose recall was demanded and obtained by Washington, grew here this afternoon.

Baron Zwiedinek held a lengthy conference with Secretary of State Lansing at noon. He called to see the Secretary after a lengthy conference with Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador.

Reports that Baron Zwiedinek had asked Secretary Lansing for his passports, however, were flatly denied both at the Austrian embassy and the State Department.

SILENT ON CONFERENCE.

Both Secretary Lansing and the Baron refused to discuss the conference. It was learned, however, that the subject of their conference was the letter which the Baron wrote to Consul-General von Nuber in New York, suggesting that he secure neutral passports at small cost. This, it was pointed out, at the State Department, is one of the most flagrant violations of American neutrality yet uncovered regarding any foreign envoy.

Baron Zwiedinek's defense, it was learned today, is that at the time the letter was written he was working under the directions of Dr. Dumba, and that the United States obtained reparation by obtaining the recall of the Austrian Ambassador. He holds that he cannot be held accountable for taking the orders of his immediate chief, who already has been punished for his misdemeanors.

BOY-ED TO SAIL DECEMBER 20.

Captains Karl Boy-Ed and Franz von Papen, the German naval and military attaches who have been recalled by their government, will sail from New York on December 28 for Germany. This was learned on reliable authority today.

It was stated that safe passage had been procured. Both the English and French governments have agreed to allow the offending attaches to travel on their homes without fear of capture on the seas by either of those nations.

No arrangements have been made for the safe conduct of the successors of Captains Boy-Ed and von Papen, but it is likely the matter will be taken up this week.

Pittsburgh Strike Ties Up War Work

Pittsburgh, Dec. 13.—Thousands of dollars in war munitions and other contracts were tied up today, when between 1,300 and 1,400 men struck in sixty-five to seventy foundries in Pittsburgh and vicinity. The men demand an eight-hour day at the present rate of pay for nine hours, $4 a day. The strike has been approved by the International Moulders' Union and the men will receive strike benefits.

Brandegee and Oliver Favored

Washington, Dec. 13.—The Republican Senate conference today ratified the steering committee's selections for the committees of this session. The two most important assignments, memberships on the Foreign Relations Committee, were given to Senators Oliver of Pennsylvania and Brandegee of Connecticut.

Senate Confirms Secretary Lansing

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The recess appointment of Secretary of State Lansing was confirmed by the Senate today.

HINT AT COMING ARREST IN GOUD DEATH MYSTERY

Hazel Goud, Dresden Mills, Me., girl, whose death in a Lewiston sanitarium is under investigation by the authorities.

Lewiston, Me., Dec. 13.—While the body of Hazel Goud was being laid away in the churchyard at Dresden Mills, near her home, today, the police were following up the story told them by a girl friend of Hazel and said an arrest might shortly be expected.

Miss Goud died at the sanitarium of Dr. C. K. Donnell. Her death certificate gave ptomaine poisoning as cause for her death.

Rev. J. D. McGraw of the Dresden Mills Methodist Church officiated at the funeral services today. The girl's body rested yesterday in the parlor of her home in the village.

Mrs. Goud, the girl's mother, expresses confidence in Dr. Donnell and asserts that he did his best to save the girl's life. "Hazel was our only child," she said. "She was a good girl. I never knew her to have a man acquaintance. I do not believe she had any."

On the report today of the result of the chemical analysis by the Bowdoin College chemists on the parts of the girl's body submitted to them by Medical Examiner W. L. Haskell, depends the action of the police in regard to Dr. Donnell, and the writer of the letter signed "L." and mailed from Somerville, Mass., to Miss Goud.

Just before her visit to the sanitarium.

In anticipation of the chemical report, several persons acquainted with Hazel Goud, were questioned today by City Marshals McCarron of Lewiston and Buchanan of Auburn and County Attorney William H. Hines.

Among these witnesses was a shoe operative, who lives in Auburn, and who told the police that she had talked with Miss Goud about Dr. Donnell's sanitarium. It was with this friend that Miss Goud stayed for nearly a week, going directly on leaving to the sanitarium. This girl also told the police that she herself had once been a patient at the sanitarium.

It was the second day that Miss Goud was with her, she said, that the letter signed "L." on which the police place great importance, came for Miss Goud. Miss Goud let her friend read it. It was postmarked Somerville, Mass. Another letter that came had a Cambridge postmark. Both these letters are in the possession of the police. Both refer, the police claim, to the illness for which Miss Goud entered the sanitarium.

LaForest Goud, father of Hazel, on his and trip from Dresden for the body of his twenty-year-old daughter, was shown these letters, and is said by the police to know the young man now believed to be the writer of the letters, a native of Richmond, but working somewhere in Boston.

Fined for Failure to Support Father

In the Somerville police court today, Richard McCrossan of Whipple street, Lowell, was found guilty of neglect to provide for his destitute father, Hugh McCrossan, of Warwick street, Somerville, and was fined $30. McCrossan appealed.

TILLMAN CALLS FOR BIG NAVY; RAPS MEYER

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—A navy, second only to Great Britain's is an "imperative necessity, not only to national life and honor now, but to maintain the Newer and nobler Monroe Doctrine—America for the Americans," declared Senator Tillman of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, in a speech in the Senate this afternoon.

"It stands to reason that the strongest and more efficient navy we have the less need there will be for enlargement of the army," said Senator Tillman, "for as our country seeks only to defend itself and maintain the new Monroe Doctrine as enunciated by President Tillman, if so enemy can land on our shores we would not need an army for defense, but could depend upon volunteers and the National Guard in an emergency."

Declaring that the country has been twenty years in the grasp of the armor trust ,he urged immediate passage of his bill providing $11,000,000 for the construction of a government armor plate plant of 70,000 tons annual capacity.

"The country ought to regard as a public enemy any senator or congressman who tries to thwart this purpose," declared Mr. Tillman.

Tillman bitterly denounced the critics of Secretary of the Navy Daniels, particularly former Secretary of the Navy Meyer, whom he decribed as a "mean and little man."

"Poor Massachusetts," he exclaimed, "how unfortunate in giving birth to such a man as he."

He attacked both former Secretary of State Bryan and former President Roosevelt as being extremists on preparedness.

Officers Elected by Middlesex Bar

The annual meeting of the Middlesex County Bar Association was held today in the county commissioners' office at East Cambridge. Frank Forbush of Newton, who for fifteen years has been secretary, resigned. The following officers were chosen: President, Robert P. Clapp, Lexington; vice-presidents, George L. Mayberry, Waltham, and William R. Wilson, Lowell; treasurer, Frank M. Sawtell, Malden; secretary, Charles A. Harris, Winchester; trustees, Frank W. Kann, John M. Maloney, M. Sumner Congdon, John H. Connelly and Frank Dunbar.

Sustain Law Against Prize Fight Films

Washington, Dec. 13.—Holding the Federal law against importation and interstate transportation of prize fight pictures valid, the Supreme Court today sustained the collector of customs at Newark, N. J., in excluding motion picture films of the Jack Johnson-Jess Willard prize fight at Havana, Cuba. The decision was in a test suit brought by I. Lawrence Weber, a theatre proprietor and owner of the films, who asserted he imported them not for sale, but for exhibition under his own management.

Autoist Fined $100 on Liquor Charge

George Bush of Revere, an automobilist, pleaded guilty today in Middlesex Superior Court to operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor on September 7 on the Middlesex Fells Parkway. He was fined $100.

WOMEN IN FIGHT FOR SCHOOL BOARD

It will also be borne in mind, by people who love the city and its boys and girls, that one member of the school committee is to be chosen tomorrow.

Miss Frances G. Curtis, of the present committee, the Public School Association candidate for re-election, and Mrs. Julia E. Duff of Charlestown, once more an Independent candidate, met last night at the Civic Service House, where each discussed the campaign before a small audience.

Dr. Herbert J. Keenan, nominated on the ticket with Mayor Curley's candidacy for the council, was covering the city and making brief talks to thirty or more audiences.

Mrs. Duff charged that the school centres are "detrimental to the welfare of many of the young immigrants that come to our city. The immigrant mother very often does not understand the difference between a school centre and an evening school, and so young boys and girls are admitted while they cultivate late hours and participate in dances."

Mrs. Duff made the charge that the present superintendent of schools is connected with a Western publishing house, she said is "unethical" for one of the school authorities to pass upon the books of a publisher by whom he is employed as an editor.

"No charge of this kind has ever been presented to the School committee," Miss Curtis said, "and if any such condition exists it should be brought to the attention of the board immediately."

The opinion appears to prevail that the candidacy of Mrs. Duff will affect the vote of Dr. Keenan, and vice versa. The Public School Association has conducted its usual vigorous campaign. License, the schools, and the Mayor's attempt to pick a Council that will roll over and play dead for him are all bound to bring out such a vote as has seldom been polled in Boston in an "off" year. A big vote, it is agreed, will redound to the good of the Citizens candidates, Messrs. Attridge, Collins, Storrow and Kenny.

Claim Italians Lose.

Berlin, Dec. 13.—There have been military engagements along the Italian front in the district west of the Chiese valley. The Austrians claim the recapture of advanced posts at Monts Video from numerically superior forces.

Rallies Tonight for the Citizens' Council Ticket

The Citizens' candidates for the City Council, John J. Attridge, Walter L. Collins, James J. Storrow and Thomas J. Kenny, will be heard tonight on the issues of the campaign at eight rallies, as follows:

Charles Sumner Schoolhouse, Brookside.
Tenisbeth Hall, Jamaica Plain.
Library Building, Codman Square.
Jubilee Hall, Warren street, Grove Hall.
Bloomfield Hall, Geneva avenue.
West End Municipal Building.
Old Town Hall, Brighton.
Corner of Ashland and Washington streets.

Many other speakers will assist the candidates, among the best known names being those of Councilmen Coulthurst, Coleman, Hagan and Ballantyne, Charles S. Lawler, Francis J. W. Ford, Joan F. Hughes, Sherwin I. Cook, J. Mitchel Galvin, Moses S. Laurie, William J. McCluskey, John A. Donoghue, Geoffrey B. Lehy and William S. Kenney.

JURY DIVIDED IN MRS. LOWELL CASE

The jury in the case of Miss Maud Birch, who is suing Mrs. Constance S. Lowell, wife of Professor Percival Lowell of Harvard, for damages resulting out of her arrest on a charge of larceny, today reported to Judge White that it was unable to agree. The jury had been out thirteen hours and this is the second time a jury has disagreed in the case.

PREPAREDNESS 'WAR' AMONG MINISTERS

Unitarian ministers had a little war among themselves in Channing Hall today, when the topic of "Preparedness" was introduced by Rev. P. C. Boyer, a representative of the National Security League.

Before Mr. Boyer spoke Rev. Alson H. Robinson of Newton had objected to the topic of "Preparedness" being presented to the Unitarian minister and had left the meeting.

Mr. Boyer then declared with much force, "I have come here to discuss preparedness in a calm and dignified way, and I do not propose to be met in this manner. I will be good natured in what I have to say, but I do object to being attacked by the chairman or by the chairman of the meeting, first or last, Drake."

After an apology had been made to the speaker, Mr. Boyer gave in detail his plea for preparedness, relegating his late experience in Europe, which he said had taught him that to have peace we must be prepared for war.

Rev. C. F. Dole of Jamaica Plain pleaded for good will among the nations against preparedness, and thought Mr. Boyer was talking as if in the times of Alexander the Great.

On Trial

The Greatest Mystery Story of the Year.

By Elmer L. Reizenstein.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

Gerald Trask, a wealthy banker, is shot to death in his library, Robert Strickland, a friend of the victim, is held by the police, charged with the murder. Ten thousand dollars in cash, paid by Strickland to Trask that night, is mysteriously missing from the victim's safe. At the request Mrs. Trask testifies to a mysterious woman calling her husband on the telephone the night of the murder. She heard him say, "Is that you, May?" Strickland refuses to help his lawyer, Malcolm Arbuckle, prepare his defence. Mrs. Strickland disappears. Arbuckle visits Doris Strickland, Strickland's daughter, who tells of a telephone call her mother received the night of the murder. Arbuckle visits Long Branch and finds Mr. Burke, who found Mrs. Strickland's purse at Long Branch the day of the tragedy. Burke tells of returning the purse to Mrs. Strickland.

Resolved to make Doris Strickland his star witness at the trial, Arbuckle again visits and questions the little girl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Copyright, 1915, by Dodd, Mead & Co.

I sprang to my feet. I did not propose to permit Mr. Glover to employ the tactics he had used at the inquest!

"Your Honor, I ask that the witness be instructed to answer the questions and no more."

"Strike out the answer," commanded the Judge.

Then, leaning over his desk, he said to Glover in a kind but firm tone:

"You must confine your answers to the questions which are put to you. You are not to volunteer anything, and you are not to tell what passed through your mind. Is that clear?"

"Yes, Your Honor."

"Proceed, Mr. Gray."

"Did you find the card in Strickland's pocket?"

"Yes, sir."

"Is this it?"

He passed a card up to the witness, who examined it carefully.

"Yes."

"I offer it in evidence," said Gray, repossessing himself of the card. He then addressed himself to the jury:

"This People's exhibit A, is a visiting card. On the face is engraved in old English type the name of 'Mr. Gerald Trask.' Below that is written in pencil, '206 Henderson Place, Long Branch.' On the other side is written in words and figures: '14 right 2.27, left 3.' Is there any question about the handwriting, Mr. Arbuckle?"

"We'd better prove it," said I dryly.

"Mr. Glover, are you familiar with Mr. Trask's handwriting?"

"Yes; I know it perfectly."

"You've seen it often on letters and documents?"

"Hundreds of times."

He handed the card back to the witness.

"I show you this card and ask you whether the address '206 Henderson Place, Long Branch,' is in Mr. Trask's writing."

"It is."

"Now turn the card, please. Are the words and figures, '14 right 2.21 left 4, also in Mr. Trask's writing?"

"They are."

"There's no doubt in your mind about that?"

"Absolutely none," said the witness with conviction.

"Do you know the significance of these figures, '14 right 2.27 left 3?'"

"Yes, sir."

"What is it?"

"It is the combination to Mr. Trask's safe."

"How do you know?"

"When the police arrived, I gave them this card. We looked the safe and opened it with this combination."

"Now, Mr. Glover, I call your attention to the fact that the card is torn almost in half. Can you explain how that occurred?"

"Yes, sir. As I took the card from Strickland's pocket, he snatched it out of my hand and started to tear it in half. Before he had torn it all the way, I managed to get hold of it again."

I did not cross-examine the witness.

The next witness was Dr. Morgan.

"Dr. Morgan, in what condition did you find Mr. Trask's body?"

"I found two bullet wounds."

"Describe them, please."

"One was a slight flesh wound on the right shoulder caused by a grazing bullet."

"And the other?"

"The other bullet entered the body just above the left breast, and lodged in the heart."

"That's all, Dr. Morgan."

Again, I stated that I had no cross-examination.

"That's the case for the prosecution, Your Honor."

There was a murmur, possibly of surprise, in the court room, which His Honor promptly checked. I heard the words:

"Proceed with the defence, Mr. Arbuckle."

Strickland may have thought that he had drained the cup of bitterness to the dregs, but I realised that one of the bitterest hours of his life was yet to come. From my heart, I pitied him! But it was the only way.

"I'll call Miss Doris Strickland."

The effect of these words on Strickland was electric. His child was, apparently, the one point at which he might be said to be still vulnerable. I, of course, interpreted the deeper significance of his attitude. It was not only his child but his wife that he was willing to protect even at the sacrifice of going to a dishonored grave, not only as a cold-blooded murderer, but with the additional brand of a thief. That was what I deemed it my duty to prevent.

He stood swaying by the table as if he were unnerved, as he pleaded ones again with His Honor not to let me carry out my plan for his defence.

"No, Your Honor, I will not that! Don't let her testify. She's my little girl. She is all I've got left. Don't let her testify!"

"For the moment, even Mrs. Trask might have found it in her heart to pity him. But I saw no sign of pity in her cold face as I glanced at her.

"You must leave your case in the hands of your counsel," admonished Judge Dinsmore, severely. "He will protect your interests."

"But I want to be protected. Protect my little girl. Don't bring her in here."

At that moment, Doris came into the room, holding the hand of one of the attendants. Her eyes sought her father. When, at length, she saw him, all the pretty color left her face. In spite of what I had told her in my effort to prepare her for his changed appearance, I could see that she was stunned at the havoc which the weeks had wrought.

"May I speak to my Daddy?" she whispered, as I went over to her.

"Only a moment, dear child. Remember that you are going to be a brave little girl and answer all my questions so that all these people can hear you. You and I are the only two persons who can help your father."

"I'll remember," she promised.

I led her over to her father's side. In another second, they were sobbing in each other's arms. I waited a minute, and then I put my hand on Strickland's shoulder.

"Come, Strickland, this won't do. Come, Doris, tell that little woman to come and sit up in that chair there."

"No, no! Take her out of here. She's all I have left to me."

"Up there, Doris."

I took her by the hand and led her to the witness chair.

"Your Honor," said Strickland in a last desperate effort, "I want to keep my child out of this. It's the only request I've made. You're a man, Your Honor, a father, perhaps—"

"I am powerless to help you," said the Judge gravely. "I am merely an instrument of the law which will mete out justice to you. The law must be permitted to take its course. Proceed, Mr. Arbuckle."

Strickland sank into his chair. He buried his face in his arms spread out on the table before him. Not once while the child was on the stand did he alter his position.

"Your Honor," said the District Attorney, "I respectfully ask that the competency of this child to testify be determined."

"By all means, Your Honor," I hastened to agree.

Again, Judge Dinsmore leaned forward from behind his desk. His tone was unwontedly gentle.

"How old are you, Doris?"

The child gave him one of those quick appraising glances with which children accost strangers. Apparently she was satisfied with the result of her scrutiny, for she gave him a brave little smile, and answered in a clear voice which could readily be heard in any part of the crowded room.

"I'm going to be nine years old on 6th of November."

"And do you go to school?"

"Yes, sir. I was promoted. I'm in the Grammar School now."

"Did you ever go to Sunday School?"

"Yes, sir. I went every Sunday before—before my Mamma went away. But now my Aunt Helen won't let me go, because all the children talk about me and make me cry."

"Did you learn in Sunday School that you must always tell the truth?"

"Yes, sir. That's one of the Ten Commandments. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor. That means that you should never tell a lie. Miss Weston told us that."

"Who I, Miss Weston?"

"She's my Sunday School teacher. She taught me all of the Ten Commandments. Shall I say them for you?"

"Not now."

The Judge turned to the District Attorney with a smile.

"I think she may testify. Proceed, Mr. Arbuckle."

I crossed over in front of the table where I could be nearer.

"Doris, what is your full name?"

"Doris Helen Strickland."

"Who is your father?"

"That's my Daddy there."

She stood up as if she were about to run back to him, but I stopped her with a warning look. She remembered her promise.

"Robert Strickland, is your father?"

"Yes, sir."

"Doris, do you remember the night on which Mr. Trask was shot?"

"Yes, sir."

"Had your father been away from home?"

"Yes, sir." He was away in Cleveland. Buying a house for my mamma and me to live in."

"And he came back that evening?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now, just before he came home, where were you?"

"I was in our sitting room."

"What was about half-past seven, wasn't it?"

"Yes, sir."

"And what were you doing?"

"I was waiting for Daddy."

"Yes, I know. But were you reading, or playing, or sitting still?"

"I was practicing my piano lesson part of the time."

"And then?"

"And then I remembered that my mamma was lying down resting, and I stopped."

"And what did you do then?"

"I went and sat behind the end of the sofa and played with my dolls until Mamma came in to telephone to the man about the purse she had lost."

At the table behind me, I could hear Strickland stir uneasily, but he did not lift his head.

Through all that long story which we had gone over together again and again, I led the poor child. There were times when she hesitated; times when she appealed to me with a look to spare her from the long and harrowing ordeal to which I was asking her to submit. After the preliminary questions and answers I was careful to stand so that she could not catch even a glimpse of her father's bowed head. I was more afraid for him than for her. I knew that I had succeeded in instilling into her childish mind that she was doing it all to help her "daddy." I felt sure that I could count upon her loyal devotion to him, but it was too much to suppose that she would be proof against the strain of his making another of his passionate appeals to the court.

How much of the story that she was telling he took in, I had no means of judging. But from time to time the choking sound that I heard from the table behind me made the apprehensive that he was nearing the breaking point. At all costs, I must get Doris' story before the jury. Once establish that the motive for shooting Gerald Trask had nothing to do with the disappearance of the money in his safe, I felt that Strickland had a chance for his life.

True he had asserted and reiterated that his life was valueless in his own eyes. No doubt he had justification for thinking so. Nevertheless, I believed that, should he escape being called upon to pay the extreme penalty of the law, the day would yet dawn when he would be thankful to have done so, if only for the sake of his brave little daughter.

Not that I imagined for a moment that the child before me in the least comprehended the significance of the shameful history I was dragging from her reluctant lips. To imputo such knowledge to an innocent little girl would be monstrous. But it was none the less a hideous and frightful experience for her. The shock and terror of the circumstances surrounding the disappearance of both her parents was with her still.

Added to this, the meeting with her father, the dreadful change in his appearance, the mystery which enveloped everything connected with him, the uncertainty as to when they were going to be united again coupled with the total disappearance of her equally loved mother only added to the strain under which she was labouring.

At last we were nearing the end. The child had done marvels. I could not have asked for a better witness. Upon the few occasions when she had faltered, I had only to admonish her with an upraised finger—the signal we had agreed upon—and she found new courage to go on.

We had come to the point in her narrative when her frantic mother had attempted to get Gerald Trask on the telephone and had snatched her child in her arms hysterically calling her by every endearing name that her distracted mind could suggest, when Doris broke down utterly.

"I'm afraid! I'm afraid!" she sobbed. "Don't cry, Doris. I won't be much longer. Whom did your mother call up?"

"Mr. Trask. But he wasn't there."

"How do you know he wasn't there?"

"Because Mamma said: 'I will call again.'"

"Then what did she do?"

"She cried, and walked up and down the room, and said lots of terrible things."

"What did she say?"

"She said: 'Why didn't I tell him! Why didn't I tell him!'"

"What then?"

"Then I cried, too, because I was frightened. I wanted to talk to her, but she wouldn't. I was awfully afraid. I'm afraid now."

"Don't cry, Doris. It will only be a few minutes longer. Then we'll be through with you."

But, for the time being, she had completely lost her self-control.

"I want my mamma!"

"Try not to cry. Just a little while longer. That's a good girl. Are you listening to me?"

"Yes, sir," said the poor child, choking back a sob.

"Did your mother call up again?"

"Yes, sir. And she said: 'Is that you, Gerald Trask?' I don't want to talk any more. My head hurts and I'm afraid!'"

"Don't be afraid. We'll be finished in a moment. Your mother said: 'Is that you, Gerald Trask?'——"

"Yes, sir."

"What happened then?"

"Then—then—I don't know."

"Yes, you do, Doris. Just try to think. You've told me about it a great many times."

"I don't remember."

"Try not to think a moment. Be a brave girl. Did you hear a noise through the telephone?"

"Yes, sir."

Here, the District Attorney saw fit to interrupt us.

"If the Court please, I must insist that my friend refrain from leading the witness."

"I submit, Your Honor, that the child is labouring under a terrific strain, and that I must be allowed some latitude."

"Try not to lead the witness," admonished the Court.

"You say you heard a noise, Doris?"

"Yes, sir."

"What kind of a noise was it?"

"I don't know. A funny noise. Like a little firecracker."

"And what did your mother do when she heard the noise?"

"She screamed and said: 'My God, he's killed him!' Please let me go. I don't want to talk any more."

"Just one more question, and you'll be all through."

"I don't want to."

"What did you mother do after she said: 'My God, he's killed him?'"

"She took me in her arms and said me cold said: 'Good-bye.' And I cried because it hurt when she said 'Good-bye.'"

"Did she go away then?"

"Yes."

"And have you seen your mother since that night?"

"No, not at all. I want to see her, said the child, sobbing afresh.

"Do you know where she is?"

"No, sir. Please tell me I want to see her. I want to see her. Daddy dear," she added in her shrill treble, down the steps of the witness stand, "why did you make my Mamma cry and go away from me?"

I caught her in my arms, and turned with her to the Court.

"That's the child's story, Your Honor!"

"For God's sake, you're torturing my little baby!" cried Strickland, unable to control himself longer.

"I move that the child's testimony be stricken out," said the District Attorney stormily.

"Mr. Strickland, silence!" The Judge rapped with his gavel.

"You're torturing my little girl!" repeated Strickland wildly.

And so ended the first day of the trial.

Opera Stars Aid Italian Red Cross

Miss Ruth Lovers, a young pianist, was the star at a concert given under the auspices of the Dante Alighieri Society in aid of the Italian Red Cross fund in Symphony Hall.

She played Ravel's "Jeux d'eaux, Debussy's Soiree dans Grenade and Liszt's transcription of Paganini's "Campanella," and several recalls she played a Hungarian rhapsody by Liszt. She is a very promising player and her work was beautiful.

The Boston Opera orchestra opened the concert by rendering an overture by the late Giuseppe Buonamici, the celebrated pianist. The orchestra, led by Robert Mosenthal, gave an excellent performance.

Miss Maria Almazio was in fine voice when she sang an aria from "La Forza del Destino." Mr. Zenatello sang the romance from "Carmen" and another aria in a pleasing manner while Miss. Villani sang the romance from "Aida" by Chenier.

Mr. Fabriato, violinist, played pieces by Martini, Saraste and Vieuxtemps. Mme. Mimi Aguglia recited "La Canzone d'Oltremare" by d'Annunzio.

Film Picture Show Warships in Action

WHAT makes a naval battle the most thrilling event of a war? Why does the story of even a minor encounter at sea prove more engrossing that the most decisive engagement on land?

How would you like a grandstand seat at a naval battle free from danger? To see the huge guns of a battleship send forth volumes of smoke as they hurl tremendous shells on errands of death and destruction?

This is made possible for you through the medium of the French official war films. These authentic pictures, taken for the archives of the French government, are now exhibited continuously at the Tremont Theatre.

These films, the most remarkable ever taken in the world's history, show you every detail of a modern naval battle. They show you the big twelve-inch guns of the French battleship Jaureguiberry booming forth. A moment later you see the vast column of dirt and debris thrown up as the twelve-inch shells strike their mark ashore.

You see a British squadron in action. The great battleship Agamemnon fires rapidly with her four twelve-inch guns, while shells from Turkish batteries fall all around her. Her fighting top has gone, smashed by a shell, but she vigorously continues her bombardment. You see the battleship Majestic firing broadsides, shortly before she is sent to the bottom by a submarine torpedo with a loss of several hundred lives.

THE RUSSIAN FLEET.

The next moment, as if by magic, you are transferred to the Black Sea. Here the Russian fleet performs its revolutions for you. You see the battleships Panteleimon and Syvatoi Evstafil attack the Turkish forts on the Bosphorus.

You see the masonry of the forts crumple up under the tremendous rain of shells, until they are completely demolished. A torpedo boat suddenly darts away from the squadron to attack a Turkish sailing ship trying to run the blockade and carrying provisions and ammunition to the Turkish armies operating in the Caucasus.

The torpedo that signals the sailing vessel to halt, but the order is ignored. Then one of the 6-pounder inch guns aboard the torpedo boat flashes forth, and a blank shell falls just ahead of the Turkish boat. A second later another falls just astern, and before the column of water has subsided, a third shell strikes the sailing vessel's rudder. She then surrenders.

After the Turkish crew has been taken off the torpedo boat's crew proceed to see the Russians set fire to the sailing vessel and then depart in quest of other blockade runners.

REVIEW OF FRENCH BOATS.

From the Black Sea you are wafted back to the shores of France. At a "somewhere" in France, you board a flying boat, and are taken on a grand review of the French fleet from the air.

After your return a submarine awaits to show how war is conducted beneath the water. This submarine is one of the largest in the French navy, representing the last word in warfare. It shows you how a torpedo is discharged, and you see the bubbling wake as that messenger of death speeds on its way.

You are taken ashore. You come face to face with General Joffre, the famous commander, who yesterday was made supreme commander of all the French forces. You are brought into intimate touch with King Albert of Belgium, King George of England, President Poincair of France, Lord Kitchener, and all the other famous leaders of the allied forces.

Most wonderful of all, you witness an actual battle on land. You see the French soldiers waiting at the foot of a snowclad hill in the Vosges. They stand alert, anxiously awaiting the order to advance.

SOLDIERS IN CHARGE.

Suddenly the order is given. The men dart forth at the double toward the German trenches, plainly visible on the summit of the hill. The impetus of their rush carries them up the hill. Here and there a figure staggers, trips, and then falls inanimate, a black shape on the white snow. The others press on until finally the crest is won.

Not only do you see the famous French "75" field guns, but the larger weapons are placed in action before your eyes. You see air scouts start forth on their important but dangerous mission.

These films enable you to see more active engagements than any man actually taking part in the great war will ever see.

Sentence Masher to Serve 4 Months

In Cambridge court today George Karabisiaques, twenty-six, of Elm street, Cambridge, was today sentenced to four months in the House of Correction, under the new "masher" law. Karabisiaques was complained of by several young girls in Cambridge who alleged that he had accosted them upon the streets. He appealed and was held in $400.

Hall Caine's Son to Play in "Christian"

Derwent Hall Caine, son of Hall Caine, will appear in the leading role in the dramatization of his father's novel, "The Christian," at the Castle Square Theatre this week. Derwent Hall Caine, though but twenty-three years old, has been on the stage several years, appearing only in parts created by his distinguished father.

Robert Strickland returns from his business trip to Cleveland to be greeted by his wife and little girl. Left to right—Doris Strickland, Robert Strickland and Mrs. Strickland.

Worthless Trusses to Blame

For Your Rupture Troubles

If you have to wear your truss so tight that it cuts into your sides, binds your hips or presses on bones, you are suffering unnecessarily and your truss is WRONG.

If you have to buckle or fasten it up so tight as to cause undue pressure on parts not connected with your rupture, you are taking dangerous chances with an appliance which should never be worn by man.

Result of 45 Years' Experience

It took Cluthe Sons many years to find out just what was wrong with leg-strap and spring trusses, and many more years to perfect a guaranteed rupture holder, to overcome the shortcomings of the many unsanitary and unscientific contraptions generally sold.

A 60 Days' Trial
For A Thorough Test

We have so much faith in our guaranteed rupture holder—the Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss—that we are willing to make one to order for your case and send it on a 60 Days' Trial.

So confident are we of our success in your case that we are willing to let you try it under the most liberal trial plan ever offered to ruptured people for their protection.

Individual Personal Service

In marked contrast to the way other things for rupture are sold, we make each Cluthe Truss to order for the individual case as described, with the privilege of prompt readjustment if desired or required—absolutely guaranteed to hold and so place you in such physical condition as can alone result in improvement or complete recovery, as it has in thousands of other so-called hopeless cases.

Remarkable Cloth-Bound Book FREE

Without any obligation whatever on your part you may receive free our remarkable cloth bound book containing facts which 300,000 individual personal and mail fittings during the last 30 years have taught us. Among other interesting things our book exposes the humbug "methods," "appliances," "locks" and "plasters," explains about the dangers and failure of operations for rupture, how the famous Cluthe Truss does away with the misery-causing belts, leg-straps and vise-like springs, how it is waterproof and may be worn in the water and bath, how it automatically holds the rupture from coming out even under the hardest strains, and tells why—for the protection of the public—druggistores without a knowledge of rupture should not be allowed to sell trusses. The book tells how our responsibility and reputation make the Cluthe Guarantee your real safeguard for success or no cost to you, gives 5,000 Endorsements (publication permitted) from people made better or entirely well, and how if you decide after thorough investigation of the facts, you may test the Cluthe Truss on 60 Days' Trial.

Simply fill out information coupon below. It places no obligation on you, but will give you the chance to learn how you may be freed from the misery of wearing leg-straps, belts and springs.

ONLY TWO WEEKS LEFT TO HELP BASKET FUND

Christmas is less than two weeks away. The Christmas Basket Fund has been growing these last few days, but in the next week or so it must make rapid strides every day in order that all of the appeals for Christmas baskets that are coming in the Christmas Basket Editor's mail may be taken care of.

Christmas baskets going to the homes of the needy of the city means not only a basket full of good food for a Christmas dinner, but it means also a cheerful day for those who would like to celebrate Christmas and have happiness all around them but can't unless the Christmas baskets are forthcoming.

Just think of Christmas Day passing and homes with little hungry children in them, ever having a Christmas dinner, let alone a Christmas tree and the joy and Christmas gladness that goes around your own fireside!

A contribution NOW to the Christmas Basket Fund, ever so small, will mean that you have done your part to make some other fellow's Christmas brighter and happier and your own Christmas happier by the thought of your giving.

BIG BENEFIT DEC. 21.

The actor folk who are away from their own homes on Christmas Day but know what the "kiddies" want on the one day of the year, are doing their part to help swell this Christmas basket fund along.

All the theatrical stars that will be playing in this city around Christmas time have volunteered to help out with a great big charity performance to be held at the Colonial Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, December 21.

Tickets go on sale for this performance today at the box office of the Colonial Theatre. Get into line early and make this line so long that all the traffic officers will have to take a hand in aiding in the Christmas spirit by keeping busy.

Montgomery and Stone, who open in "Chin-Chin" at the Colonial Theatre the day before this performance, will help toward making the Christmas of Boston's needy families one long to be remembered. Big acts from this Monday theatre and Stone show are on the bill.

STARS TO GIVE AID.

The star acts from the "Show Shop," which is at the Park Square Theatre, and all the leaders from "The Only Girl" company, now at the Shubert, will be on the program. You can't stop actor folk from helping charity. They are always a part of any charity movement that is started if it will help be of any use.

Vaudeville acts from B. F. Keith's and the Loew houses will be represented on the program, but that is not all. Hap Ward—you all have heard of Hap Ward. Well, he will be there, too, and with him will come Lucy Daly. Just what these two people will do for charity would be telling, but they certainly will have acts that no one can well afford to miss.

The show starts at 1 o'clock. As Larry McCarthy will be the stage manager, it is sure to start on time. It will then be kept going until one of the biggest bills ever offered in a Boston theatre finishes its performance.

Again let us say: The tickets are on sale now at the Colonial Theatre, and it would be a good time to buy a ticket or two to help along the Christmas happiness campaign TODAY.

CHARITY BALL NEARS.

But another chance the people of this city and vicinity will have to aid this fund will be by attending the big charity ball to be given at Symphony Hall on Monday evening, December 20.

Mayor Curley and the members of the Tammany Club have this affair in charge and they are putting forth their best efforts to make it a success. The receipts are bound to give the fund a big boost.

Rather a busy week, but then it is all for charity. So give. Go and have a good time both by your giving and by your attendance.

Two young Dorchester women, Miss Julia M. Connor and Miss Margaret J. Ryan, will also have an event for the benefit of this Christmas Basket Fund. They are to hold a bungalow party at Oberts' bungalow, Mattapan, Saturday evening, December 18. The matrons for this event will be Mrs. Edward Easley, Mrs. Fred Sargent, Mrs. John Connor, Miss Margaret Murphy and Mrs. Thomas Rooney.

There are many ways to help along the campaign for Christmas happiness, but one of the best is to make a subscription now. TODAY, while the Christmas spirit is abroad, to the Christmas Basket Fund. Thus can you help make some poor family happy on Christmas Day.

SAVE THE COMMON!

Vote Against Mutilating the Most Famous People's Park in America for a Few Automobile Shoppers.

1. Do not let Boston Common go bit by bit, an acre now, or more later.
2. Louis K. Rourke and other experts say the street widenings are unnecessary.
3. Parking autos in the middle of Tremont Street, as proposed, would create congestion where it does not now exist.
4. Give subway pedestrians their rights. Do not make it any more dangerous for the 200,000 people who cross these streets twice daily.

LYNN LIQUOR MEN CHARGE BRIBERY

The Lynn Licensees' Association today submitted to the police evidence which they claimed showed attempts by bribery to swing Lynn into the No-License columns so that the saloon men of Chelsea should reap a harvest of profits from Lynn men who might go there for liquor.

The evidence submitted was in the form of sworn statements by the men whom the vice-action accuses of the attempted corruption.

But Chief Burckes of the Lynn police and Chief Inspector Thorne, after considering the affidavits, told the representatives of the association that the evidence was not sufficient for warrant arrest, and suggested they lay the matter before the Grand Jury.

President Richard J. Kane of the association and William M. Lyons, the treasurer, issued a statement offering a $500 reward for evidence leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone who tampers or approaches a voter and offers him money for his vote.

The claim is that a former representative made this offer. The other two men involved live in Chelsea.

To Open School of Preparedness

The School of Preparedness, under direction of the associate members of the Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., will open at the regimental armory Wednesday evening at 7:30. The announcement of the school states that it is not primarily to prepare men to carry muskets, but to instruct civilians for duties in the transportation of troops, the collection of munitions and the business end of war, which is as important as fighting.

Earth Shocks Last Through 24 Hours

Washington, Dec. 13.—The seismograph at the Georgetown University observatory has registered continuous earthquake agitation for the last twenty-four hours, it was announced today by Father Tondorf. The most violent agitation was at 4:03 p. m. yesterday. Owing to the continuous agitation, it is impossible to tell from what quarter it is coming.

MRS. MOHR TO BE TRIED WITH OTHERS

arate trial; that she be tried last and that the prosecution be ordered to file a bill of particulars specifying the exact time and place of Mrs. Mohr's alleged plotting of the murder.

These motions were all swept aside by Judge Rathbun following a debate between opposing counsel that lasted three hours in the Providence County Superior Court.

CUSHING SWORN.

Mr. Cushing early in the hearing took the witness stand and was sworn. This was unusual in arraignments on motions. The attorney explained that he desired the privilege in order to furnish a basis for his demands for the legal rights asked for Mrs. Mohr.

Mr. Cushing's utterances were jotted down by a stenographer and added to the records. His testimony was resented by Attorney General Herbert A. Rice.

Mr. Rice and Mr. Cushing did not spare each other professionally. Mr. Rice said:

"I do not think it proper for Mr. Cushing to take the witness stand and attempt to repeat matters mentioned between him and me in confidential confidence. I see that I must change my attitude if he insists in acting like this. It is not according to the ethics of our profession."

"I am forced to repeat certain things," said Mr. Cushing, "in order to protect my client and to defend her rights."

CLASH OF COUNSEL.

"I understand," added Mr. Cushing, "that the Attorney-General is to offer as the alleged confessions of Victor Brown, George Spellman, George Healis and of Mrs. Mohr. I contend that this would be contrary to law.

Mr. Rice—My brother is laboring under a misapprehension. I do not intend, nor could I, offer in evidence any such confessions, but if any of the defendants come into the court and to make a statement against either of the co-defendants, that will be entirely according to law and practice. Mr. Cushing evidently cannot accept a job when he talks about an alleged confession by Mrs. Mohr. We have boasted of no such confession.

Mr. Cushing—The Attorney-General has in his possession an alleged confession of George W. Healis made later than the other alleged confessions, and I contend that it is inadmissible. I ask that Mr. Mohr be given a separate trial and that she be tried after the negroes. I see that the prosecution furnish a bill of particulars. It is not right and fair and just to my client to try her with the three accused colored man.

QUESTION OF EXPENSE.

Mr. Rice—To grant Mrs. Mohr a separate and later trial would be eminently unfair to the taxpayers. Suppose the negroes were tried first and alone and that they carried their case on appeal to the Supreme Court. Mrs. Mohr, under such a contingency would not be tried for two or three years. It would be unjust to the people of Rhode Island.

Mr. Cushing—I have been informed that Attorney-General Rice has said that separate trials would cost $15,000 each and that he objects to the additional expense, but what is expense or trouble compared to the rights of those accused of so grave an offence? What is money compared with justice?

Mr. Rice—I do not propose to tell Mr. Cushing or anybody else how I intend to try these defendants, or to disclose any of the State's plans. I would like a say to this court that the motions offered today simply go to show the artificial and technical pleadings that have become the practice in the criminal courts of Rhode Island.

Finds $100 Diamond in Chicken's Craw

Philadelphia, Dec. 13.—Mrs. Otto Wesner of Colwyn purchased a chicken from an East Lansdowne dealer a few days ago and prepared it for dinner. When she opened the bird's craw she found in it a blue-white diamond weighing more than a carat. An expert told her it was worth more than $100. Since then the dealer has a "run on chickens."

Bromwell's Death by Suicide, Says Cable

San Francisco, Dec. 13.—A cablegram received from Honolulu said at rest rumors that Lieutenant-Colonel Bromwell, stationed there, had been murdered by a Japanese spy.

"Absolutely no foundation to the charge that Bromwell was murdered. Authorities are satisfied it was a case of suicide."

Thrilling Climax in the Strange and Tragic Life Story of Mrs. Mohr, Accused as Slayer

Elizabeth Blair, born in Norwich, Ct., and reared in Trenton, comes to Providence as a salesgirl, meets, loves, and weds Dr. C. F. Mohr, a middle-aged physician, whose first wife divorced him because he was friendly with Miss Blair.

The new Mrs. Mohr becomes jealous; there are many quarrels and reconciliations. Two children were born to them. Dr. Mohr, by adopting unprofessional methods in his practice and by enlisting rich Newport and Providence women among his patients, becomes wealthy. The purchase of a fine Newport home is reported by his wife to be the climax of their happy married life. Thereafter, they drift apart.

For two years Mrs. Mohr constantly spied on her husband, even using her children as her spies. he instigated a girl's attempt to involve him in an attack; and Dr. Mohr won the subsequent lawsuit. In May, 1915, the State still claim, she first decided to bring about the doctor's murder.

She enlisted a negro hostler, Victor Brown, as her aid, and bought him a motorcycle and otherwise planned the murder, the State says. Her jealousy of Emily Burger kept her in a fury.

In August, 1915, she went to New York to try to enlist a gunman for the murder, the State claims. Failing, she tried to induce Brown and Spellman to do the trick. Then Dr. Mohr re-engaged Miss Berger as his housekeeper.

CHAPTER VI.

THE LAST DAYS.

The chronology of the last few days of Dr. Mohr's life is this:

August 30—Cecil Victor Brown was discharged.

August 31—Emily Burger was hired as temporary housekeeper at Newport.

August 31—First murder plan failed.

August 31—Murder plan succeeded.

When Brown's discharge had fired his hatred of Dr. Mohr, the State of Rhode Island will claim, Mrs. Mohr found him more willing to fall in with her plan. Before that, he and Spellman have said, she had besought them to kill the doctor, but they had put her off.

But his discharge made Brown a more active enemy of the doctor. The circumstance of Emily Burger's again entering the life of the doctor, this time in the intimate relation of housekeeper, served to set Mrs. Mohr's determination unshakeable, the State will claim.

Emily Burger had been threatened more than once by Mrs. Mohr, Florence Ormsby has said:

"Emily told me that Mrs. Mohr had threatened her over the telephone. She said she was afraid. She said Mrs. Mohr wrote and telephoned warnings, and that she followed her in the street when she went shopping, and shadowed her from store to store like a detective.

"Mrs. Mohr was a sticker when she got on one's trail."

This statement that Mrs. Mohr following Miss Burger on shopping expeditions may explain a statement in the letter Mrs. Mohr wrote to George W. Rooke, and which in part is responsible for her arrest.

Rooke is a brother-in-law and staunch defender of Miss Burger. The letter he received he turned over to the police; and when Chief Inspector O'Neil showed Mrs. Mohr the letter and asked:

"Mrs. Mohr, did you write this?"

Mrs. Mohr replied:

"Yes, that is my writing. But I never threatened Miss Burger's life. I told Mr. Rooke that Miss Burger must stop going around with my husband; that was all. Of course I never meant any harm."

LETTER NOW IN THE HANDS OF THE POLICE

This letter is in the possession of the police. It was apparently written by Mrs. Mohr in the first frenzy when Florence Ormsby told her that the doctor had again engaged Miss Burger. That would be on August 26. The letter reads:

"Dear Mr. Rooke:

"Just a line to ask you to tell your sister-in-law, Emily Burger, if she dares to go into my Newport home, she will never come out alive. I am giving her fair warning.

"No matter what the outcome may be, I will see it through.

"I was told about her buying linen at Gladding's for Dr. Mohr. I do hope you will try and straighten matters, and I know you can't stop her from going out to dinner with him, but she will have a sad ending if she keeps on aggravating me.

"The world is with me in my sorrow. I am heartbroken.

"Respectfully,

"ELIZABETH T. MOHR."

If this was written on August 26, the day Dr. Mohr engaged Emily Burger as his housekeeper, then it was that night or an event occurred which doubled the fears the doctor had been feeling.

That night, Dr. Mohr left Providence as usual in his automobile in time to catch the 7:15 Bristol ferry. Landing on the Bristol side, the car—driven by Healis—sped on toward Newport. Almost immediately the doctor noticed that the automobile was being followed by a motorcycle.

The man on the motorcycle made no attempt to overtake the car. He kept in sight, slowing down when the car slowed and speeding up when the car moved more swiftly.

The pursuit continued to Newport; but when the doctor's car turned into the side street that led to "Montpelier," his home there, the motorcycle sped past without stopping, and disappeared.

Miss Burger had gone to Newport by train earlier in the day and was at the mills when the doctor arrived. He spoke of the pursuit to her and to Healis, and Miss Ormsby has said that he spoke to her about it next day. She quotes Dr. Mohr as having said:

"I was trailed last night by a motorcycle. It clung to me all the time. When we speeded up the cycle did so. When I ordered Healis to go slow, the cycle slowed down. I wanted to see if it was trailing us. I don't like the looks of it. It really gave me a scare. I think it was Brown."

Brown himself has confessed to going over the road to Newport on his motorcycle to pick out the spot for the murder. He has described how he sought a spot that would answer his needs for the shooting, and how he finally chose the spot where Dr. Mohr was shot.

But he never said "yes" or "no" to the question whether he did trail Dr. Mohr on this night after Emily Burger had been hired.

He may have done so, as a spy for Mrs. Mohr. There is evidence that the wife kept an eye on the doctor on his trips to Newport. She had someone on the Bristol ferry boat who watches for the doctor's crossing. Miss Ormsby has said:

"Dr. Mohr pointed out to me the man on the ferry who told Mrs. Mohr when he crossed and who was with him. I could pick the man out any time."

At another time she quoted Mrs. Mohr as admitting to her that she had a "friend on the ferry" who kept her posted.

The date of this breakage, Brown says, was three months before the murder, but the State is expected to claim it actually happened on August 27, only four days before.

There was an important step to be taken before the murder could be carried through. Spellman appears to have owned a revolver. But Brown had none. Brown had said that Mrs. Mohr gave him the money to buy one. He said:

"She sent me to Boston to buy the revolver, and gave me the money. The revolver was bought in a Bench street pawnshop with $6 Mrs. Mohr gave me."

PLAN FOR MURDER THAT FAILED

Dr. Mohr was murdered on the night of Tuesday, August 31. But there was earlier attempt that failed. This is on the statement of George W. Healis, the chauffeur of Mrs. Mohr's automobile, and now under indictment with the others for the murder.

Healis says that the murder was originally planned for the night of Saturday, August 28. His story is that he was to stop the automobile at the appointed spot, but that at the last moment his courage failed him. He said, in substance:

"We had planned to kill the doctor on the night of August 28. Brown told me where to stop the car, and I was to signal when I stopped by flashing the headlights, so they would be sure they had the right car.

"I agreed to do this. But on that night, August 28, I had other passengers. Miss Ormsby, as well as Miss Burger, was with Dr. Mohr in the automobile.

"I was queasy. I was afraid things would go wrong, that there would be trouble. I didn't know what to do. Finally the car came to the stretch of road where I was to stop.

"I decided not to stop. I put on speed, and we went past the spot where Brown and Spellman were waiting at high speed, and on to the ferry and to Newport.

"That was Saturday night."

The statement by Healis has been full of significance for Mrs. Mohr; for if the murder was planned for Saturday night it may have been for purposes of robbery, as Mr. Mohr has charged.

Mrs. Mohr, when first brought face to face with Brown after the murder said:

"You know you came to my house and said that you were going to get square with Dr. Mohr because he did not pay you what he owed you. I told you not to be foolish."

At another time she said: "These negroes planned to rob the doctor, and then when they were caught they tried to foist the blame on me."

Brown himself has said, on the robbery supposition:

"Dr. Mohr, on the first day of each month, always carried a large amount of money with him, and to this day we thought that it would be easier to get it if it appear that robbery was the motive."

Miss Florence Ormsby, moreover, has made statements that strengthen the robbery theory if the murder was planned for Saturday. She said in discussing Dr. Mohr's financial affairs:

"There were eleven servants on the Newport place. Dr. Mohr paid them out of the receipts of his office practice. He had paid all but four of the servants on the Saturday before the murder.

And she added—and this statement would appear to weaken the theory that robbery prompted the successful attack on Tuesday night:

"Healis knew that Dr. Mohr had paid seven of the servants three nights before the shooting on Saturday night."

Miss Ormsby has added a significant statement as to the Saturday attempt. She said:

"Mrs. Mohr called me on the telephone on Saturday, July 28, and told me not to ride in the doctor's car that night.

"Will Dr. Mohr, did disfigure Miss Burger?

The next day events moved swiftly.

SHADOW OF T. R. HANGING OVER REPUBLICANS

By International News Service.

Washington, Dec. 13.—The shadow of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt hung heavily over the gathering of the Republican clans here today.

With the majority of the members of the National Committee on the ground for tomorrow's meeting at which the time and place of the national convention will be decided, and with hundreds of members of Republican clubs on hand to "talk things over" the chief topic was the Colonel.

It seemed to be the general opinion that if the former President desires to come back, his return to the party will be smoothed as much as possible.

Reports that William Barnes, Jr., Republican national committeeman from New York, had proposed that the New York delegation to the convention be headed by Roosevelt, were denied by Mr. Barnes today, who said:

"I am not responsible for expressions of opinion except such as I make myself. The Republicans of New York will take such action as they see fit, from this time until the day of the primaries, April 4. What their action will be is not for me to say."

The last week of June or the first in July will be the time for the convention. On the city to be selected the members were badly divided today. There is an undercurrent of bitter opposition to Chicago, which is giving hope to the representatives of the other cities who had feared that the selection had been arranged in advance. Enthusiastic delegations from St. Louis and Philadelphia are battling hard for advantage.

ST. LOUIS WANTS CONVENTION.

The big delegation from St. Louis has swung more than one committeeman to its way of thinking by the argument that inasmuch as the Democrats said the reason they selected the Mound City was to keep Missouri in the Democratic column, it would be good politics for the Republicans also to go there and take the State away from them.

San Francisco and Honolulu have also asked for the convention, but their claims are hardly being seriously considered because of geographical considerations. The opposition to Chicago is based chiefly on the claim that the last convention there split the party.

The first big gathering takes place tonight when the national Republican clubs hold their banquet.

SEVERAL BOOMS ON.

Although there are more personal booms running loose in the hotel where the meetings will be held than have seen the light of day in Republican circles for many days the preponderance of the talk is for Justice Hughes of New York, who insists that he is not a candidate. Senator Burton of Ohio, and former Senator Root of New York.

The Weeks, Estabrook, Fairbanks and Borah booms are incidents to the big show at present, although the word is being quietly passed to "keep your eye on Fairbanks."

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes without sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective.

They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

DORIS BRYAN A FINE HOSTESS

MISS MARGARET WATSON GIVES BALL TONIGHT

MISS DORIS BRYAN.

She is one of the attractive members of the Brookline younger set. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon R. Bryan of No. 118 Dean road.

One of the attractive members of the Brookline younger set is Miss Doris Bryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon R. Bryan of No. 118 Dean road.

Miss Bryan, who came out during a recent season, belongs to a group of girls who are constantly prominent in social activities both in Brookline and in Boston.

She is athletic and an adept in a number of outdoor sports and has received much praise for her excellent qualifications as a hostess.

o o o

The week's social events will begin tonight with Miss Margaret Watson's ball at the Somerset. Miss Watson, the daughter of Mrs. Charles Herbert Watson of Beacon street, Brookline, was presented last Winter in the same ballroom.

Mrs. Watson will entertain at dinner preceding the dance, at her Brookline home. The ushers will be Samuel Cabot Almy, Gardner Whitman Bullard, Randolph R. Brown, Harold H. Davis, Charles F. Eaton, James Garfield, Alpheus M. Geer, Marland C. Hobbs, Thomas F. Mackie, T. Ellis Stebbins, Wendall Townsend and Clement E. Stodder.

o o o

Miss Amy Lowell will be introduced by Mrs. Lionel R. Marks (Josephine Preston Peabody) today when she will read selections of her own poems for the benefit of the International Institute for Girls in Spain.

Miss Lowell is the president of the New England Poetry Club and Mrs. Marks is the honorary president.

o o o

Mrs. James J. Storrow will preside at a dinner at the Women's City Club tonight. The guest of honor will be Mrs. Mary Schenck Woolman, who will speak on the "Social Interests of the Professional Woman."

o o o

Mrs. George Browning Wilbur of Bay State road is leaving today for her Winter home in Florida. The Boston residence will not be closed, but will be kept in readiness for an occasional visit throughout the season. Miss Tucker, a relative of Mrs. Wilbur's, will accompany her south.

o o o

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Manning will be at No. 170 Bay State road for the Winter.

Mr. Manning is a brother of Mrs. Robert S. Minot of Beacon street and his wedding last August to Miss Lillian Quincy Rutland, Vt., was of much Boston interest.

INQUEST ON D'ANTUONO TO BE HELD

An inquest into the death of Dioguno D'Antuono, the young North End Italian, who died following an attack by an insane patient in the men's ward for insane at Pierce Farm, is to be held in the West Roxbury Court. Medical Examiner Leary will fix the date.

Dr. Leary performed an autopsy and pronounced D'Antuono's death due to hemorrhage of the brain. The fact that the Italian's assailant is suffering from incurable insanity will, in the opinion of officials, avert prosecution. But the authorities must investigate the death in order to make sure that an accurate history of the case is obtained.

D'Antuono was twenty-seven and married. He was committed to Ward F with other new insane patients. On December 7 it is alleged that a young man, suffering from paranoia, whose name is withheld, struck D'Antuono a blow that knocked him unconscious. The young Italian is reported to have approached the assailant in a friendly manner and to have put his hand on his shoulder for a chat, when the other, afflicted with the hallucination that people were pursuing to injure him, felled the new patient.

Dr. Herbert S. Frost treated D'Antuono, who died two days later in the Boston State Hospital. Nils Olson and John Blue, two guards, pulled the infuriated young man from his victim. Other patients are said to have been so angered that they attempted to attack the Italian's assailant, who is now in solitary.

Symphony Concert Aids Pension Fund

Light music featured the Boston Symphony Orchestra's program for the pension fund concert yesterday afternoon in Symphony Hall. And the great audience, that filled every seat and had many standing along the halls, apparently took huge delight in hearing some of the selections that have been played until they have grown hackneyed, take on new charm as they were perfectly performed under the direction of Dr. Muck.

Strauss' "Blue Danube" and Rossini's "William Tell" overture—how often heard, but how rarely heard as the Symphony played them! The players might smile at the contrast in the classical they usually play, but it was a treat not soon to be forgotten.

The melodies of the Strauss waltz seemed never to have sounded so beautiful before. It had added beauty and cast a new spell. The Rossini selection, too, was rendered in memorable manner, with an ardor and workmanship that made it ring.

The first number was Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 1 in E minor, which is always enjoyable. The other selection was a suite, "Promenons," by Lalo. Of the four parts, the serenade and theme with variations were particularly happy. Dr. Muck conducted here with especial zest.

The audience applauded generously, welcoming the change in the admission of popular prices for the afternoon, and revelling in the beauties of the classical. It was a most unusual program as Symphony concerts go, but proved most pleasurable.

Opera Stars to Join in Honoring Pavlowa

Next Wednesday evening will be Pavlowa night at the Boston Opera House, for at the instigation of several leaders of the Boston society the management and the artists have decided to turn the farewell Boston performances into one in honor of the famous dancer.

"The idea has been so spontaneous and the artists have been so eager to show their appreciation and admiration of Mme. Pavlowa that had we acceded to all the requests for the privilege of taking part in the performances the program would have lasted a day and a night," says Director Rabinoff.

"As it is, we have arranged as comprehensive a program as possible and all the leading artists of our company will take part in it. The plan that is in honor Mme. Pavlowa has come from the Boston people, and it is but another proof that, even if Bostonians have not responded to our call in as large numbers as we have expected, they are not city hearted. This act is appreciated as it is here."

While it has not as yet been decided what form the feting of Mme. Pavlowa will take, requests for seats are already pouring in, and there is every indication that it will be a red letter night in the Boston opera annals.

The program consists of the second act of "Aida," third act of "Rigoletto" and first act of "Pagliacci," followed by a divertissement of ballet dances.

LOOKING FOR WORK

Everywhere men complain about work; even boys and girls in school or business find work tedious and irksome, but it isn't the work half so much as their own lack of physical strength that makes it hard.

Rich blood, strong lungs and healthful digestion make work pleasurable in business, in school or even housework and if those who are easily tired —who are not sick, but weak and nervous—would just take Scott's Emulsion for one month and let its pure concentrated food create richer blood to pulsate through every artery and vein—let it build a structure of healthy tissue and give you vigorous strength—you would find work easy and would look for more. Insist on Scott's.

12 Harvard Men Hired as Blood Transfusionists

Perhaps no stranger occupation has ever been received in any college employment bureau than that of blood transfusionists. Twelve Harvard students served in this capacity during the past college year. The valiant dozen who submitted to the blood operation earned $93, or an average of $16.95 a man.

More than 1,000 positions were given out through the Students' Employment Bureau at Harvard in 1914-1915, the figures showing an increase of seventy-eight men employed over last year, but a decrease of $16,641.17 in the amount earned.

Other unique positions for college workers was that of boatmen, who earned $100. Two acted as dancing teachers, one as a recorder and one as a janitor.

Other jobs secured through the bureau included farmer, bookmover, farmer, waiter, yacht hand, soda shifter, chair mover and typewriters.

Iron Moulders Go on Strike in Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Dec. 13—Between 1,100 and 1,500 iron molders employed in foundries in Pittsburgh and vicinity are on a strike as part of a nationwide movement for an eight-hour day. The strike began at individual shops where notices were posted announcing that the union men would not return to work unless their demands were granted.

3 BOSTON MEN ESCAPE HOTEL FIRE

New Bedford, Dec. 13.—Three Boston men were forced to slide from the third floor to the sidewalk on rope fire-escapes, and Mrs. Edward Pothier, wife of the proprietor, was carried from her room unconscious by firemen when a fire today swept the lower floors of the Motel Bristol on Purchase street.

Charles Loring and J. Odson and his brother were the Boston men who were awakened in their rooms on the third landing by dense volumes of smoke and hurriedly uncoiled the ropes fastened near the windows.

Mrs. Pothier's escape was very narrow. The firemen broke into her room just in time. It was some time before she was revived. She was overcome by fright and smoke.

Manager Pothier estimated the damage as $8,000. The firemen say the fire was caused by crossed wires in the rear of the clerk's office. Clerk Frank Melville discovered smoke at 4:30 and sent in a still alarm to police headquarters. The police pulled an alarm on Box 44, which called all the central apparatus.

The hotel office and bar were swept by flames when the firemen arrived and the fire was spreading along the second landing. The hotel had thirty guests and sixteen employes. Most of them escaped by way of the rear stairway.

Print 164,000 Ballots for City Election

Ballots for the city election tomorrow were turned over to the Election Commissioners today. There are 164,000 ballots, of which 146,000 are for men voters and 18,000 are the smaller ballots for women, who are limited to the choice of a school Committee member. About one and one-fourth tons of paper were used to print them.

For the election, 114,956 men and 11,663 women voters are registered. The registration of men at the State election was 111,132 and the registration of women voters at the last city election was 9,613.

Ward 20, with 12,150 voters, has the largest registration; Ward 24, the second largest ward, has 9,241 voters.

The ballots will be sent to the polls in care of police early tomorrow morning.

Prof. Russell Would Save the Common

Professor George E. Russell of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a traffic expert of the Boston Transit Commission, today declared his opposition to taking land from Boston Common for street purposes, but not from sentimental reasons. He said that most of the congestion was due to pedestrians crossing the streets. This condition, he declared, could be improved 100 per cent, by expert traffic handling in charge of experienced policemen.

JAIL FOR 3 IN NEW BEDFORD VOTE CASE

New Bedford, Dec. 13.—Three men found guilty of vote-buying were today sentenced by Judge F. N. Milliken in the District Court to serve terms in the House of Correction.

Albert Bird received six months and Frank H. Swift and Charles W. Sullivan twelve months each. All appealed and were held in $500 for the January term of the Superior Court, at Taunton.

Because of the rivalry in the recent city campaign and the crusade against vote-buying, great interest was shown in the cases of the defendants. Bird was tried a week ago and Judge Milliken reserved decision until today. At the suggestion of their attorneys, Swift and Sullivan waived examination and consented to sentence, an unusual proceeding.

Swift and Sullivan, the latter a negro, were each charged with two counts. The trials before juries will be held tonight, say sympathizers of the accused.

TALK OF TRADING MARANVILLE RIDICULOUS

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

ONCE a year the magnates of the major leagues grab the centre of the stage and hold it for two or three days. During this period there is much mystery and many rumors of trades. Little of anything happens to startle the baseball public, while the corridors of the Waldorf, in New York, are crowded with the curious, on hand to get a close glimpse of the big men in the game.

THIS is the day before the gathering of the National League club owners in New York. There is also in that city most of the Federal League and those who manage is interested in the International League, so the two or three days will not lack talk, which in about the best thing that happens.

LOCALLY there is a little interest in the proportion which President J. H. Gaffney has in bringing umpires for the entire season, is this being done soon after the adoption of the league's playing schedule.

President C. H. Ebbetts has a scheme to have the schedule start a week later than usual, which he will speak upon at length. He will probably meet with much opposition which, by the way, is nothing new for him in the way of experience.

WHILE at this time there is nothing to indicate any peace proposition with the Federals, the "talk" is in the air. Those in the National League who have expressed themselves as upon the situation have come out strongly in favor of a settlement with the Feds, but things in baseball work out strangely, so anything is possible.

THE Braves are in the gold for any thing which will strengthen the team. Manager G. T. Stallings will be in New York for the meeting of the magnates and will confer with President Gaffney upon the question of salaries for the new contracts, as well as figure what can be done in the way of buying a man or two to boost the club's chances.

THERE is no talk of trades, in fact President Gaffney has said that he was looking to strengthen and weaken his team. In line with the statement he has spiked the rumor concerning Johnny Evers, and the talk that comes from New York that he would trade Shean, Wilhelm and Smith for Herzog looks to be the ravings of some "bug."

MARANVILLE is a Boston institution and will remain with the Braves as long as he plays. He is a clever man and is no danger of doing his plan as stated. If Herzog comes to Boston it will be through a purchase, and that is not likely.

What the Cincinnati club wants more than money is a player or two. I don't believe any amount of money will buy Herzog's services.

"Rabbit" Maranville is ill in bed at Springfield home, recovering from a very bad cold.

BUSINESS MANAGER W. E. HAPGOOD gave out a statement yesterday in a general way the work in Spring training planned for the Braves. As has been stated in this column before, the team will remain at Hot Springs, the training period, with possibly a trip to Cuba for a series of games.

The tour up north will be a short one also. The team opens its season away from home, so no local game before the season will be played.

IF President B. B. Johnson is looking for outside capital for the Cleveland club of the American League, why wouldn't James McLean be about the best bet for owner of the "Naps."

There are few men in baseball who are known than Jim, or more highly respected. If he could be induced to buy the club it would be a big boost for baseball in the city which is the home of the "fans" can get.

PERHAPS an interesting feature of the meeting in New York will be the signing of Pat Moran to manage the champion Phillies again. That is sure to be at the gathering. He and President Baker will probably get together.

CAPTAIN EVERS has returned to his home in Troy. He is more than likely the one of those present at the league meeting.

TY COBB kept up his average in the "Hunt League" by bagging two deer and several hundred squirrels on his six-day trip down in Southern Alabama.

Gallant Is Choice Over Harry Pierce

Bridgeport, Ct., Dec. 18. — Gilbert Gallant, the Chelsea, lightweight, rules a 3 to 5 favorite over Harry Pierce in their ten-round bout here tonight. The advance sale indicates one of the best crowds of the season. From here Gallant leaves with his manager, Joe McCaffrey, for Denver, where Gilbert meets Frankie Burns of California December 23.

Handball League to Start.

New York, Dec. 18.—The newly formed Intercollegiate Handball League has announced its schedule. Columbia, Princeton, Yale and Rutgers form the circuit. The opening match will be February 14, when the Yale play on the Columbia courts.

Diamond Date for Trinity.

South Bethlehem, Pa., Dec. 13.—Trinity is on Lehigh's baseball schedule and will be met April 25 on the local diamond.

Home Run Baker Willing to Join New York Yanks

By International News Service.

Tampa, Fla., Dec. 12.—It is up to "Wild Bill" Donovan to hitch up his grays, drive down here and see J. Franklin Baker, erstwhile home run manufacturer of the Athletics. Then he must talk turkey with Connie Mack at the annual meeting of the American League in Chicago on Wednesday. That J. Franklin is a much changed person was gleaned from the following conversation today:

"They want me back in the American League, do they. Well, I'm glad to hear that. Of course, I'd like to be back. I like baseball too well to stay out of it. I saw Bill Donovan ten days ago. No, I did not sign with him. We talked matters over, but came to no agreement. There's nothing to the yarn that I am going to the Chicago White Sox."

When asked whether he would play with the Yankees in New York if terms were satisfactory and the deal could be arranged with Manager Mack, Baker replied.

"I'd sooner play in New York than any other place. Its nearer my home and I always wanted to be near home as possible. Even the Federal League does not appeal to me. If Donovan could arrange things satisfactorily I would go to New York."

THE RABBITS' COLUMN

by Walter J. Maranville

(CRACK SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES)

PRESIDENT GAFFNEY'S plan to have the league assign the umpires for the entire season is a good one, and I hope it will be adopted. It will put a stop to the endless talk of favoritism in selection, except in so far as the individual choice of umpires may be open to criticism by the "fans."

TRADE talk is always in the air, in season and out. Over in New York today the men of baseball are waiting for the annual attempt to strengthen their clubs. The "David Harums" will have to be satisfied this year. Many clubs would like to grab players, but few, if any, can afford to loosen, for the 1916 race looks as if it would be about as keen as any in the history of the game.

THE American League is having its troubles settling upon a solution of the financial tangle in Cleveland. It will probably be one of the principal topics for discussion when the presidents gather at Chicago. A new owner must be found or it is likely that this will occur before the meeting adjourns.

I UNDERSTAND that George V. Brown will have no difficulty filling his property for the annual indoor meet of the B. A. A. so far as relay races are concerned. The athletic manager of the club has a pile of applicants for a place. By the way, these meets have always appealed to me as being the most attractive part of this big event.

WHILE I never have been up one of those trans-continental baseball tours, I cannot see why they should be regarded as tedious to the game. To the contrary, it seems to me the games are a big attraction. There are few men in baseball who are in cities where only minor league baseball is played for a long way and keen interest in the big end of ball the "fans" can get.

I HAVEN'T heard that the last trip, under Frank Bancroft's direction, developed any injuries to any player. The Braves had two men on the National League payroll, Evers and Sherwood Magee. These men came through with all their arms, eyes and legs. I expect to enjoy many a story when I meet them. J. J. is some storyteller and "Slaggie" is a sarcream when it comes to relating his experiences.

A TRIP with a bunch of good fellows, star players, is a treat. It keeps the men on edge, mentally spurring them on to further endeavor, for what ball player does not like the compliment implied by being chosen to play on an all-star team.

I SAW a reference made to a hockey game in which Ottawa secured a goal for a Canadian team, part of the consideration being the transportation from Hong Kong to Vancouver. This was some expense, to be sure, but I figure what club owners have in mind in that direction. All the Pacific Coast players on the Boston clubs, I understand, are under a strict interpretation not only from their home city to the training camp, but also to and from the contract, but from Boston back home again. This figures considerable money in a season.

ONE of the busy managers at the New York meeting will be Roger Bresnahan, if what I read is correct. Roger is always active around the Waldorf corridors during a league session. "The Cubs must be a strenuous bunch," seems to be the slogan of President Thomas.

THERE there is that conference between Mr. Mack and President Baker to consider. Yes, I think you will see some news from Shibe Park pretty soon.

INTERNATIONAL MAY INCLUDE N. E. CLUB

By FRANK G. MENKE,
Sporting Editor International News Service.

New York, Dec. 12.—Big doings are expected to be unearthed during this week. Trades galore are expected to take place. Some may become a reality—others may be the usual gossip which presages the meeting.

The town is full of baseball moguls. The International League holds its meeting today. The National League magnates will begin their pow-pow tomorrow. Chase will talk to settle baseball war with the Federals is filling the hotel corridors.

The most important matter to be taken up by the International League is the change of circuit. The Richmond and Harrisburg franchises may be shifted. The Atlantic City territory. Springfield and Hartford are the cities mentioned as likely to be included in the circuit next season.

The National Commission may be asked to aid the minor organization. Dame rumor has it that President Barrow is interested in a syndicate that will buy the Cleveland Americans and that the international leader may become the president of the Indians. Barrow is non-communicative.

Charley Herzog, the Reds' leader, is slated to go according to all reports. Its may be traded to Boston or Brooklyn. The Dodgers are keen for the scrappy leader.

Manager McGraw is out to bolster up the Giants. Chief Meyers may not be seen in the Giants' line-up next year, provided "Mac" can utilize the outfield to good trades.

The peace rumors have it that the Federals will be taken in with baseball, but then these rumors have been prevalent for some time only to be met with the statements that "it is a fight to the finish."

Thomas Hooks Up with Kennedy in Gloucester Ring

The members of the Lenox A. C. of Gloucester are in for a fistic treat tonight when Al Thomas of England clashes with Gerald Kennedy of Lawrence in a twelve-round bout. The men will box at 155 pounds at 3 o'clock.

Thomas boxed Walter Butler of Revere at the Lenox A. C. during the Summer and showed he was a clever boxer, but he was outgeneraled by Kid O. Brown. Some of the boys Thomas has boxed are Benny Leonard, Willie Ritchie, Jack Dillon, Walter Mohr, Johnny Dundee and Frankie Callahan.

In the semi-windup Eddie Camp of the North End will send punches with Joe Hirst of Gloucester for eight rounds. There will be two preliminaries between local boys. A large number of Boston fans will go down on the 7 o'clock train to see Eddie Kid Wolfe show. Both has all the earmarks of being a good one.

Hawaiian Poloists Plan Paying Visit

New York, Dec. 12.—An all-Hawaiian team is expected in the East in time for the annual tournament of the Polo Association at the Lakewood in April to swing through the circuit thereafter up to and inclusive of the annual championship tournament of the Polo Association at the Point Judith Polo Club tournament (Nov. 8, 1, in July and August.

Zbyszko Hooks Up with Aberg Tonight

New Yorke, Dec 13.—Alexander Aberg, world's champion Greco-Roman wrestler, will meet Stanislaus Zbyszko in a finish match at the Manhattan Opera House tonight. Zbyszko, Masked Marvel will appear each night of the week in an effort to smash his way through to the final hustle.

Kilbane Is on Sick List.

Cincinnati, Dec. 13.—Tonight's battle between Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion, and Ritchie Mitchell of Milwaukee has been postponed until Wednesday night. Kilbane is ill and asked for the respite.

Harvard Personals

THERE is no truth in the report that Murphy is planning to break up Christy Mathewson for season after next whether or not Fred Mitchell is successful on his new job. Mathewson graduates treasurer at Cambridge, says if Mitchell makes good the ex-Brave will be sure to be "canned" by baseball.

HARVARD'S worse baseball fault of late years has been the dearth of dependable pitchers. The fault, according to some, has not been in the material, but in the methods of teaching the players.

MITCHELL'S specialty is nursing along young pitchers, and, coupled with his all-around experience and natural sagacity, the Crimson following is looking for big times in the spring.

DEAN BRIGGS will probably act as toastmaster at the coming banquet to be tendered the victorious Harvard football team by the Harvard Club.

Just An Earful—By TAD

SOMEONE said some years ago that one way to get along in the world was to keep your ears open and your mouth shut?

Ever hear of Hear Pisacke, the Holland champion?

You, sure, he met Kid McCoy in Philly about twelve years ago. There was an awful bullabuloo over the big cheese, and the affair drew quite a crowd. This guy Pisacke, you know, weighed almost as much as a dreadnought and was the Woolworth Building of the hopes for fist.

He had McCoy worried by the stories of his fights, but the Kid said nothing, but waved and nod on the night of the fight sawed more. He looked at the big slob in the other corner and figured out how to lick him.

They fought the first round, and although the Kid did belt the gigantic gorgonzola hard and often he failed to drop him, and tired quite some in his efforts.

He came up for the second round still tired, but hopeful.

Pisacke, who looked like nothing human, put up his dukes and faced the Kid. McCoy suddenly dropped his hands, and pointing to Pisacke's corner, said:

"Say, that second of yours wants to speak to you."

The big hoob turned, and as he did so McCoy unbottoned a right that started from the floor and ended against the Dutchman's chin.

Half an hour later when he woke up in the dressing room Pisacke asked:

"Say, vot did dot feller vont me for?"

BOWLING NOTES

THE Regals of the Greater Boston League, which up to last week made their home on the Regal alleys, Roslindale, are now at home on Murray alleys.

THE second week of competition in the Boston Loop prize tournament ended Saturday and low scores won the specials offered for the highest single and total. Star Lodge failed to hang back until a tournament is well under way. Here's the average bowlers are now gathering in the prizes.

THE Loop management mailed out entry blanks to every bowler of prominence in New England and the returns have been heavy. One feature of the roll-off during entering is that there is no time limit, as has previously been the rule.

LAST week's best scores in the Loop competition were: Neville—Ryan, 141, highest single; O'Neil, 340, highest total. Individual—10 strings, Mahoney and Rodie, 371; Anderson, Ryan and Brown, 361; Sullivan, 965; Swanson, 941; Rodie, 936. Doubles—10 strings—Brown and Swanson, 1355; Miller and Tripp, 1323; O'Neil and Smith, 1312, and Rodie and Sullivan, 1305.

KELLEY of the Rowinsky team, Somerville, is waiting to hear from Eddie Grant of the Court street alleys, Malden challenged Grant to a twenty-string match for a purse of $50, but has received no reply.

THE second of a series of inter-club matches in bowling, checkers, pool and billiards between members of the Boston Y. M. C. U. and the Malden Y. M. C. A. will be decided Thursday evening at the Union, No. 48 Boylston street.

BOSTON Y. M. C. U. team lost its first bowling match of the season to Cambridge Social Union.

TOMORROW night the Remington Five and Underwood Second quintets meet for the first time this season in the Typewriter League. They occupy first and second places, respectively, in the race.

REMINGTON First has yet to lose a match, while Underwood Second dropped its first and only game to Royal and Underwood First also clash in the record.

THE New Broadway alleys in Chelsea will house the Walton League for the rest of the season. This organization will meet three times a week from now until April. The lanes are under the management of Timmy Burns of Suburban League fame.

TIMMY will also keep an eye on the Chelsea square alleys, where the Chelsea Five duckpin league every evening, excepting Saturday.

MANAGER LUCKMAN of the Walford alleys, Castle square, will start a one-ball tournament going on night. He is planning upon opening another floor about Christmas, such a move his business is be doing.

THE Paramount bowling team seeks matches with fast quintets in the vicinity of Boston. Address Manager Jack Gilman, No. 686 Washington street.

THE Malden Pinboys are out with a challenge to any pinsetting outfit in the State. Oakside and Reading preferred. Address Manager Bernard McNamara, No. 99 Pleasant street.

STACKHOUSE and Jenkins are tied for the individual scores in the Odd Fellows' League. Following in close order are MacPherson, 98; Haworth, 97; Buff, 97; Ellis, 97; Trayler, 97; Paterson, 96, and Moore, 96.

BASKETBALL NEWS AND GOSSIP

CHANCES are that local enthusiasts will have an opportunity to see Rabbit Maranville in a game of basketball right before long. The Shawmuts of Roxbury are making an effort to arrange a game with the Springfield All-Stars of which the illustrious "Rabbit" is one. The Shawmuts also want to play here, so all probability the game will be booked.

ONE game over which Roxbury enthusiasts will have plenty of opportunity to rave if it is arranged, is the Shawmuts' game with St. Alphonsus.

FRANKLIN, N. H., team has already arranged games with strong Manchester basketball teams. Still Manager Harold Marvel will appear each night of the week in an effort to smash his way through to the final hustle.

Kilbane Is on Sick List.

Cincinnati, Dec. 13.—Tonight's battle between Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion, and Ritchie Mitchell of Milwaukee has been postponed until Wednesday night. Kilbane is ill and asked for the respite.

WILLIAM BRADY, manager of St. Mary's Intercollegiates of Lynn, is looking for games with all 120-pound teams in the State. His five plays at home on Mondays and Thursdays and away on other nights.

DOWN at Fort Andrew one of the fastest soldier teams seen around Boston in years has been organized. Its lineup includes Jones and Hayes, forwards; Prince, centre, and Harvey and Welsh at guards. Teams looking for games can be accommodated by addressing Manager F. Hunt.

ABOUT Frank M. Fitzgerald of No. 22 Kenny street, Dorchester, B., there is nothing at all backward. While Frank declines he is managing "the fastest team in New England," he neglected to mention its name. However, he did remark that in his lineup were Harvey, McCarthy, Nolan and Fletcher.

THE modest Fitzgerald is thus succeeded within this team I defeated Lawrence Military Five, Co. M. of Milford, Revere, Fall River Independents, Dean Academy and many others, and think I deserve recognition among the different teams this year. Would like to hear from managers who think they could give me a good game.

ALGONQUINS of Winthrop are desirous of getting games with all strong 130-pound teams away from home contests. Address E. D. Sullivan, No. 45 Belcher street, Winthrop, regarding games.

THE fastest 110-115-pound teams in Greater Boston are not barred by the manager of the Granite A. C. of South Boston. There are two teams attached to the club and each seeks contests. James Hayes of No. 19 Beckler avenue, manages the first team and Phillip E. Kendrick of No. 64 G street handles the second.

ACCORDING to Jos Kelly of No. 28 Mt. Vernon street, Charlestown, the Mt. Vernon A. C. is all speedy however, and would like to hear from undefeated teams in and around Boston. Kelly especially desires that the St. Mary's seconds take notice.

YET another Charlestown manager comes to the front with a push looking for games. This time Edward Nish of No. 42 Mt. Vernon street, grasps his pen in hand to challenge the fastest 100-pound teams in the State. Nish makes the condition that the teams he play must have suits as well as reputations.

ALL the members of last year's Ascension Club five will be on the floor again this year. They have a few open dates left for home games on Saturday nights. Address William Sharpe, Emanuel House, No. 11 Newcomb street, Roxbury.

WILLIAM M. Grady of West Lynn announces that the St. Mary's Intermediates are again in the field. They will meet all 120-pound teams either at home or abroad.

WEST END HOUSE JUNIORS are out with a call to all 100-pound teams in Greater Boston. They play home games at the Blossom Street Ward Room on Wednesday nights. Address Manager D. Cowen, No. 3 Barton street.

LEWIS' MANAGER CALLS GLOVER AN INGRATE

Comes to bat Jimmy Johnston, the New York fistic impresario, who handles Ted (Kid) Lewis, the brilliant English boxer, who has fought his way into favoritism among Boston's patrons of the Queensberry game, with a long spread to the boxing history of the AMERICAN.

It is Johnston's contention that Lewis and Mike Glover were to have met in a return bout in Boston tomorrow night; in fact, his telegram, dated last Thursday, does not as much as embrace "Soldier" Barfield's name, but does include one word about Lewis being on the sick list. A section of Johnston's missive follows:

"After all the talking about Lewis being well thrashed by Mike Glover, after the wonderful Mike agreeing to meet Lewis again December 14, it seems that the scaly bird got cold feet and ran out. Lewis, when he defeated Glover the first time, came right back and defeated him again. When he beat Glover he came back like a champion and now again is fast, he will give every man he has met and deserved the chance to beat him the second time. Lewis whipped Charley White and walloped the pants ringside, last July, and then in Boston, Lewis also whipped another of the so-called lightweight championship contenders, Joe Mandot, weighing in at 135 pounds at 5 o'clock.

The match for December 14 between Lewis at the Arena, the South Boston boy said that nothing would suit him better than to give the Britisher another trimming and just as soon as the firm of Murray and Lewis says the word Mike will gladly sign articles. The billing of Fighting Dorman a second or a third time is nothing new. "Pinhead-plus Jack" O'Brien and Mike Gibbons needs extracting, dinary, made a specialty of doing it, and they have pie-like alcovemen of unusual unity.

Lewis is the idol of Boston's big army of fighting patrons and he will register the hit of his young life if he can defeat Mike. So go on with the lightweight at the new Armory A., Inc., for which Jack Murray is described in the presence of the local sporting editors. The Kid is deemed the number of every heavy-handed lightweight ring to a certainty, providing his fellow-countryman, Freddie Welsh, will condescend to meet him—and if the lanky Londoner can scale at 135 pounds.

Lewis has been fighting as a welterweight for a few weeks and Boston's most capable fistic judges have him labeled a welterweight and will be agreeably delighted if Ted can make 135 pounds. Johnston goes as far as to say that if Ted cannot make the ringside, for Mike in New York last July, he will forfeit $1,000 as a fact, 135 would be a snap for him.

Gary Club Out to Settle Bantam Title

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Gary, Ind., is going to be the scene of some big fights, title and near title affairs. This was the decision of the promoters when they met with the local services of "Kid" Williams, Johnny Coulon, Frankie Burns and Johnny Kilbane, the reigning four champions in the bantam weight division. It is their plan for the January show to bring two of these four into the ring in the Hoosier arena.

Lexington High Out with Diamond Card

Lexington, Dec. 13.— Sub-Master Frank Simmons announces next Spring's schedule of the Lexington High baseball nine. Thirteen games have been arranged, including the usual eight conflicts in the Mystic Valley Interscholastic League. Coach Ed Wright, '14, is captain of the nine and Jack Fielding, '14, will be the manager. Lexington's first game will be with Brookline High April 14.

Williams Seeks to Have League Formed

Williamstown, Dec. 13. — William College not only wants a football league, composed exclusively of New England colleges, organized, but favors baseball and basketball being taken up under the same head. The local school plans taking the initiative in having the proposed organization formed.

Fermoyle to Lead Revere.

Norman Fermoyle, Revere High's speedy back, has been elected captain of the '14 football eleven. Fermoyle have been awarded Captain Hall, Fermoyle, Inzhall, Hall, H. Kuter, Gillis, Gibbs, Nigio, Ancella, R. Wells, Spinelli, Chambers, Patterson, Kibbi, McKay, Lewis and Manager York.

Tom Reilly Is to Stay.

New York, Dec. 18.—It is considered practically a certainty that Tom Reilly, formerly of Yale, will be signed to continue as New York University's football coach, if terms and Rutgers is one of the given dates. Indiana is anxious to be added to the schedule.

Welsh Boxes in Philly.

Philadelphia, Dec. 13.—Philadelphia boxing "fans" will get their first glant at Freddie Welsh in a long time tonight when the lightweight champion meets Jimmy Murphy, the local sensation, in one of the uptown arenas.

Amateur Show for Brockton.

The St. Patrick's A. A. Society of Brockton has an amateur boxing show carded for next Friday evening. There will be bouts in the 122 and 146-pound classes. Entries close Wednesday.

BOXING BRIEFS and GOSSIP

THE happy announcement is made by Mish Murray and Ivy Lewis that the "fans" will find conditions at the Hippodrome tomorrow night all that can possibly be desired.

THERE were some slip-ups and a lot of inconveniences at last Tuesday night's show. This was only natural, as the new Armory A. A. was put together in a hurry and did not have time to set the stage properly.

THE men in the main mixes are to be Mike Glover of this neighborhood and Barfield, the latest Boston well press-agented and quite active New York welterweight. They are carded to go the usual twelve rounds at a poundage of 146 pounds, same to be made at 5 p. m.

BARFIELD is expected to strip a trifle bulkier than Glover. Still, there will be much difference between the make-up of the two boys and the scrap should prove a corker.

DAN McKETRICK, one of Big Broadway's managerial wizards, is managing Barfield. He claims that his charge is the premier puncher in his class. Likewise, as clever as they come.

NOT long ago Barfield knocked out "Italian Joe" Grim in New Haven, Ct., in four rounds, and the next night gave "Knock Out" Brennan all he wanted in Buffalo, so says Mr. McKetrick claims the "Soldier" did, though the bulk of the Buffalo critics had Brennan in front by a rod at the close of their peppery ten-round setto.

CHARLEY BAKER of New York, manager of Johnny Dundee, the Harlem lightweight, who looked so good against Charley White in a midseason setting at the Arena up to the stretch turn, when he blew up and lost a fight he had in good as cinched up, writes the AMERICAN stating that his boy was recently carded to Mish Murray to go to war with Ted Lewis.

STATES Baker: "Harvey was willing to box, but Lewis refused to make weight and there was no chance to arrange the match. Jimmy Johnston has been sending out letters stating that Lewis would make weight for Harvey, but when I called on Lewis I asked him to make weight for Harvey he refused."

FREDDIE WELSH sure has right hand while fighting Abe Attell at the other night. Hence, has been forced to cancel his match with Jack Britton, down for decision at Woonsocket tomorrow night. Mike Gibbons has been substituted for Welle and the show takes place as announced.

PROVIDENCE has a new scrap club. It's name is the Marlboro A. A. and Jack Sheehan is matchmaker. He plans ringing up the curtain around February 1.

PROVIDING Doherty isn't kidding, the new member will pull off a lot of big bouts. He claims that it will be either Gallant vs. Lewis Cross in the opener and that "the 140-160 home town boy will have a seating capacity of 2,500."

WILL HAMILTON, sporting editor of the New Orleans Item and a fistic critic of renown, thinks that "Kid" Williams shaded Frankie Burns in their championship clash in his town last Monday night. Hamilton's count was ten rounds for the "Cyclone" Williams, five for Chocolate, with three of the 50-50 stripe.

Senators Said to Be After Janvrin

By International News Service.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—American League insist that reports that Washington is going to land "Home-Run" Baker, and that President Comiskey of the White Sox has offered the New York ers a pitcher and an outfielder for Peter Schaefer.

The Washington team is after Janvrin of the Red Sox, Pratt catcher of the Browns and Chapman of the Indians.

OPEN BIDS FOR TITLE FIGHT THURSDAY

Chicago, Dec. 13.—The pugilistic firm of Charley White and Nate Lewis, cling to Harry Pollok's idea in wafting until Thursday of this week before going over his bids for the lightweight title match, or issuing any excitable statements. Both White and Lewis are confident that Pollok will go through with his promises to sign before the club offering the best inducements. Then if Pollok keeps his word, White thinks he will be entitled to considerable praise. If Pollok breaks faith, then Charlie, is willing that most anything should be said about the manner of the head of the class.

White came back from Excelsior Springs, Mo., sort of wishy over the way Pollok and Lewis had treated Eddie Pitts, the representative of the Denver syndicate that wanted to stage the match. But Nate has whipped him into line, evidently, and now Charles is content to permit Lewis to handle the affair. He went back to the Springs Saturday for a stay of another week and will do road and gym work while at the resort.

Pollok has set Thursday as the day for the opening of the bids, if there are any. That seems somewhat doubtful, in view of the fact that Denver, as well as New Orleans, so far as Burns and Toronto are concerned, have withdrawn their offers. But it is said The Jones will come through with a bid and that there is hope that the Denver folks will get over their differences and stand pat on their original proposition of $15,000 for the champion with $500 expenses. Also there may be a bid from the New Orleans club.

The bids are to be opened in New York. A set of preliminary articles already has been signed and Harry Pollok will be ready, according to a statement he has written Lewis, to close the deal and name the club that gets the match.

Soccer Shots

BY defeating the Celtics, New Bedford has practically cinched the third round in the National Cup series. It was a hard fought game throughout.

THE winning goal was scored from a penalty kick by Bernier, which Christie tried hard to clear. The shot the ball through from the six-yard line.

OVER 2,000 "fans" braved the cold weather and turned out for the game.

BOSTON AMERICANS did well against the Celtics, Saturday, downing Celtics 1-1 in two minutes before the final whistle blew. The Hibs were without the services of Irvin and had the ball constantly in front of the visitors' goal, but could only tally one goal.

FRIEL, Irvin and O'Neil were the stars for the Hibs, while McShane and Mellville, the crack Celtic goalkeeper, carried off the honors for the Americans.

THE Black Bros. of the United shop team of Beverly were in the limelight up for the Americans. White playing with the Hibs had the advantage in not knowing their players as well as to keep up with the team play.

SEVERAL hundred "rooters" journeyed to Ocean Park, Lynn, expecting to see the General Electric-Fore River game, and were disappointed when they learned it had been called off.

YALE played a strong game against Haverford at New Haven, losing, two goals to one. This defeat eliminates all the New England elevens in the intercollegiate series. The championship will be fought out between Haverford and Pennsylvania.

OFFICIALS of the Massachusetts State League met at the Crawford House yesterday. Delegates from all clubs were present.

THE Protest of New Bedford Celtics over the game with Central Eleven was not entertained. So the game stands as played, a victory for the latter outfit.

CHICOPEE BOXERS will replay their double tie with Fore River at Holyoke December 25.

CONGRESSMAN CARTER of Needham has donated $25 to the State League to help out in defraying expenses.

Hockey Practice Starts Winsor Works Harvard

By JOHN J. MORAN, JR.

Today the indoor hockey season is officially open. While there will be no actual ice involved, Harvard hockey players will report early at the candidates for the first team, gather on the Arena floor and start work under Coach Ralph Winsor. Winsor has been busy getting his men in form for Saturday night, on which date Harvard and the B. A. A. seven.

Indications are that Winsor will have the best material he has had in years to pick from on the varsity squad. With Johnny Mets, at point, and Dave Weeks on the rover position, the defensive combination looks strong. Either Mets or Weeks will be shifted to cover point, and the third man will be picked from the forwards.

Practically all years letter men in addition to last year's regulars are back. Alec Morrison, Arthur Soule and Pierce Hall, forward, are the most experienced players Winsor has to work with, so he need have no worry about whipping a fine team into shape.

TWO SESSIONS FOR B. A. A.

Ralph Hale, who succeeds Winsor as coach of the B. A. A. team, will have his hands full for the first time this season Tuesday night, and then he has the ice again on Thursday. With such veterans as "Hap" Morrison, Art Dunphy, Forrest Dugood and Jack Hutchinson, all expert players, he need have no worry about whipping a fine team into shape.

Manager Lannon has appointed the same staff of officials to act in the matches at the Boston Arena this Winter as officiated a year ago. Dr. E. F. Murphy, M. D., is universally Boston referee, while Dr. Owen Brown, manager of the B. A. A. team, and "Bill" Woods, one of the biggest boosters for hockey in this section are the men who have been re-engaged to head matches.

At a meeting Tuesday evening the players of the team will elect their officers for the season. Ralph Winsor was coaching; Owen Kelly has been appointed penalty thrower.

George Brown, manager of the B. A. A. team, comes in a heroic of neutrality last night. He received a letter from a fan in Montreal who said he was a wonderful player and started a wonderful game to play with the B. A. A. He closed by asking where he would start for Boston. Brown answered "Don't come, beat it to the first car."

Up in Ontario they have not got over talking about the alleged professionalism of several of the Cleveland Hockey Club players. A recent report of the Cleveland hockey year in the Toronto Official for Hockey and Football, which appears under the signature of W. J. McLachan, manager and captain of the Young Men's Hebrews Club in hockey team of Cleveland. The particular paragraph reads as follows:

"March 8 the C. A. C.'s went East, despite the fact that they didn't have a spare man to leave and had to borrow a player for the trip, won the Eastern Championship. They won from the Boston A. A. Club, 6-3, tied the Boston Arena seven 4-4, and trimmed New Haven 3-0.

Boston hockey followers are especially those who follow the fortunes of the Arena team, will be delighted to learn that the Arena management has definitely decided to have a team in the league next season. The official announcement is expected to be made in a few days. Under the management of the Crescent Athletic Club, which controls the Arena, Manager McLachlan refers to as the Miracle Man of Hockey, has been given charge of the Arena seven for the coming season.

The indications are that there will be a banner year for hockey at Tech. At a recent Tech meeting Captain [illegible] Manager Irvin Young announced the season's plans. The games scheduled [illegible]

[illegible] Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 5 o'clock [illegible] Tech men will be given a chance to show their ability. Those who are showing up well today will be given a chance to play in the games [illegible] Tech men will be given a chance to show their ability. Those who are showing up well today will be given a chance to play in the games [illegible]

Probably the most valuable acquisition is Elmer Wannamaker of last year's Harvard seven. Next to him comes Swain, a strong defence man with Williams College a year ago. To date no coach has been selected.

Ten veterans of last year's seven on hand, in addition to Captain Cochrane, are Woodward and Johnson, Keeler and Tuteln, subs last year, are also present. There are several freshman candidates who look exceptionally good, among them being several former interscholastic stars.

Manager Young has not completed his schedule. Tech hopes to play Dartmouth and the Amherst "Aggies" when those sevens come to Boston during the Christmas holidays. Tech's first trip away starts January 8, when it goes to Hanover to play Dartmouth. Yale will be met the following Saturday, January 15 Colgate has Dartmouth.

The first game, prior to the mid-year exams, is with Andover January 18 During the mid-year trip games will be played with Springfield Y. M. C. A. at Springfield, West Point and Rensselaer Feb. 11 the Amherst "Aggies" will be played at Amherst, while Williams at Williamstown will be met the following day. Boston College will also probably be booked.

The Amherst "Aggies" have arranged a very attractive schedule fourteen games have been booked, as follows:

Dec. 22 Dartmouth at Ayer
Jan. 2 Open
Jan. 5 Yale at New Haven
Jan. 12 Tufts at Amherst
Jan. 15 Williams at Amherst
Jan. 19 Springfield Y. M. C. A. College at Springfield
Jan. 20 Open
Jan. 23 Williams at Amherst
Jan. 26 Hartford Athletic Association at Hartford
Jan. 27 Yale at Amherst
Jan. 29 Tufts at Amherst
Feb. 11 Rensselaer at Troy
Feb. 12 Army at West Point

Five veterans have reported for the St. John's Prep school team in addition to thirty new candidates. Prospects for a strong seven have not been as good since 1912, when St. John's went through the season without a defeat. Through the schedule has not been completed, games have been arranged with Boston Latin, Lowell "Tech," Pingree High, Ringe and Latin, Somerville, Medford, Malden, Salem, Somerville and Winthrop.

In Winthrop the militia organization have taken up hockey and teams will represent the Machine in Company and Mounted Orderlies. Some of the hockey players will be young men from the community, Stoddart and Howe brothers, and Leary. As Howe of No. 641 Winthrop street challenges all high school and military teams for games.

What Happened to Jane

She Looks Over the First Wife's Clothes

Jane watches her husband go through the trunk.

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Copyright, 1913, by the Century Co.

JANE and Augustus Brewer had been married for six weeks before the subject of the bride's clothes was again mentioned between them.

There was to be a reception on the following week and Augustus announced that he would find his wife attended it.

"I don't care to have you running around the country without me," he said, "but I am willing to have you for church affairs when I am along. It would look queer if anybody as important in the church as I am could find fault with my wife's clothes, and so faith. What have you got to wear?"

"My new suit," replied Jane.

"You've worn that to church both Sundays since you've been back" he objected. "Besides that, it isn't fancy enough."

"It is very pretty," Jane insisted. "Before I was married, my plain little suit with a silk skirt waist was quite fine enough for me to wear to sociables and church suppers."

"When you were a girl you were not my wife," Augustus reminded her. "That makes the difference between us then and now. I want people to know that I can dress you better than any girl I ever proposed before. And I want you to look as well as you do not with me."

And she understood that as his possessions she was expected to do him credit.

"I must say I was proud herself to look at that suit when I took it out of the trunk," she said to Mrs. Reeves. "It was no beauty, but it was very pretty and stylish. What do I care? And as I said, it is not so little, I don't need the silk."

"You need a little," he repeated. "It's just such as most wives, I guess, have enough courage to dispute their husbands' decisions. Most of the girls in Milford who go out with their husbands, and go to their neighbors' houses—or their neighbors run in to see them, I am not beginning that way, and I'm afraid people think I'm not very sociable."

"I don't care what they think," retorted Reeves. "At least I don't care what a lot of silly chits of girls think. You married a mature man, with sense at 1 position, not a boy with no idea outside of having a good time. I've no desire to gad about the country, and since that's so, you, as my wife, ought not to want to go anywhere I don't want to go.

He stopped, then, as she remained silent, resumed: "But that's not nothing to do with the matter in hand. When I do go out, and when I do take you, you must dress well. You can put your clothes all right, can't you?"

"Yes," she said dully. "I can—but I have none that can be improved by making over."

"Well, I have some for you," he announced. "My first wife had some very good clothes—things that cost money, I can tell you. And they're packed in a chest up in the attic. I'm going to give you some of them. She was larger than you, and tailor, so you can alter them all right for yourself."

"Oh, no!" Jane gasped. "No! I can't. I couldn't. I don't know how—please—I don't."

He regarded her with indignant amazement. "You don't want them? Perhaps you think they're not good enough?" Well they are—better than anything you ever had in your life. There's a good black silk, and a dark red one. The black one's extra fine—for Henrietta wore it only a couple of times. She would buy it that last Winter she was alive, though I thought at the time she'd never get the good of it. But I always let her spend her own money—I was glad to—and—plenty. She was a good girl."

Jane felt a wild inclination to laugh at the grotesqueness of it all, and at the same time felt as if she could scream at the horror of it. "But—but—" she stammered, "they are hers, not mine. I don't want them, Augustus."

"I can't help it if you do or not," he returned. "You may as well quit that silly notion here and now, because I'm going to give some of them to you. Put all of them at once—but a couple first, and maybe later I'll let you have more. Come on upstairs to the attic with me now."

He strode upstairs, and Jane, without a word, did his bidding. At the door leading up to the attic he paused, went into his room for a bunch of keys from his dress drawer, then mounted the attic stairs, motioning to Jane to f—

Jane was still dumbly. The cold of the place chilled her. Near the front of the immense garret stood a large cedar chest. This Augustus unlocked. Inside were various l—cels, wrapped in paper and labelled in a neat handwriting.

I had Mary pack these away and mark them," Augustus explained. "Every Spring I have her take them out, air them, brush them, and pack them back."

He removed the parcels, one at a time, reading aloud the labels as he did so.

"Cashmere shawl; black velvet cloak; red—no, I guess she altered that; I told you about—purple wool; white muslin—Henrietta was a great one for wearing wrappers in the morning; silk—cloth and that seems to be all the dress—I declare, it's a handsome dress! Look—the black silk—I sent it here! And whereas that yellow dress—the blue one. Lord, I—they're not here."

He stared at Jane as if expecting a reply, so she said feebly—"Aren't they?"

"No!" he exclaimed. "They're not! And they were here when I looked them over. Who—what—Lord! What in thunder's come of them?"

Again he waited as if for a reply, then, struck by a sudden idea, strode to the head of t—

Their Married Life

Helen Cuts Short Her Stay at the Bells to Warren's Disgust

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

HELEN awoke the next morning early with the knowledge that she was in a strange bed. She wondered what had waked her, but after she had waited a moment the sound of several roosters outside solved the riddle and she smiled sleepily.

She looked about the room happily. It looked very pretty in the bright sunlight that was forcing its way through the marquisette curtains which swayed in the cool November air, and she shivered and drew under the covers.

What a good time they had had at the evening's entertainment.

Frances had been so full of life that they had laughed till their sides ached. At twelve thirty the telephone had rung and Bobbie, who had been up in the kitchen making fresh coffee, had answered it.

"O, people," she had called down, "come up, it's Carp." They had all trooped up the stairs, excepting Frances, and when Bob had finally said, "Carp wants to speak to Frances," she was nowhere to be found.

Helen had listened to Carp her and had come across her suddenly upstairs, helping to put little Theodore's cot out to bed.

"Hurry dear," Helen had said lightly, "Mr. Atwood is on the telephone, he wants to speak to you."

"Run along, dear," said Mrs. Coleman brightly, "I'll be down in a moment," and Frances had gone down and before the diners had taken up the receiver and tossed a few laughing remarks over the telephone. "And now I must go," she had said, "we are dancing and I don't want to miss it a dance with Mr. Parmelee, he's the best dancer here."

She made a grimace at the man as she spoke and everyone laughed. Then she had rushed away, followed by Mr. Parmelee and several other people. Bobbie had finished the conversation and Helen had waited for her.

I think there is something wrong between those two," Bobbie had said, "Carp is—well, he's not at all natural and Frances was awfully flirtatious. Do you think they have quarreled?"

"I don't know," confided Helen, am almost sure that Frances loves him, at least I have been, but she acts so queerly."

THE DEVIL WAKES FAST AND ALL ENJOY IT

They they had all gone back to [illegible] and the fun had [illegible] Furious, it had [illegible] four when they had dispersed and they were to sleep until [illegible] breakfast at [illegible] Garnetts. What's the matter with you?" he said sleepily, "I thought we were to sleep till late, and here you are sitting around and waking everybody up."

"I wondered what time it could be," Helen meekly, and then as Warren raised his head and looked at the clock, he ripped out sharply—

"Just nine. I hope you're satisfied, now I won't get to sleep again."

Helen, who was wide awake, settled herself again and prepared to let Warren sleep until he felt like rising. Suddenly, like a flash, a recollection came to her. They had promised to have dinner with the Thurstons that day.

She remembered making the announcement nearly three weeks ago, for it was this was the first engagement they had had with the Thurstons for ages they simply could not break it if they attempted such a thing. Mrs. Thurston would be sure to say that the change in her family's plans had made the Curtisses snobbish. That would never do.

Warren," she said, resolved to have the thing over with as soon as possible, "Warren, you simply must wake up, dear; I have just remembered a dinner engagement that we have for today. We can't stay down here for the party."

Warren turned over, again and growled out

"What engagement? This is a fine time to remember one."

"We promised the Thurstons. Don't you remember I told you about it? We must go, dear. What shall we do about it?"

Warren was furious, as she knew he would be.

"Well, if you're not the limit, I want to know it. Well, you can go to the Thurstons for all me, I won't get up."

"Warren, you must. I don't want to go any more than you do, but there is no way out of it."

"Telephone, can't you? Anything, so that I can get back to sleep."

"You know we can't telephone; it's out of the question to break an engagement as late as this."

"But what about the engagement you made with the Garnetts to go over there for breakfast?"

"This one was made first," Helen firmly. Now that she had waked Warren she was determined to go through with it.

She slipped on a dressing gown and went to the door that communicated with Bobbie's. There she hesitated.

"I wish we could slip away without bothering them," she said.

"Of course you do. Why wouldn't you? Waking them up at the outlandish hour after last night's party seems to me that it would be better to let such people as the Thurstons go fish and not treat the Bells so outrageously."

HELEN DETERMINES TO STICK TO HER PROMISE

"You know, Warren, I would much rather do it, but I can't; it simply would not be right."

She knocked quiveringly at Bobbie's door and after a few minutes got a faint answer.

"Can you come out in the hall a moment, dear?" Helen said. "I want to tell you something."

Warren muttered something sarcastically as Helen went past him and out into the hall. There she explained matters as well as she could to Bobbie, who was almost too sleepy to understand.

Bobbie rushed into her room and began to get dressed, much to Helen's distress. And Warren, who was finally persuaded to get up, went to the telephone and asked about trains.

"There's one at eleven twenty," he said grimly, "so you'll all may dressing."

Helen hurried as much as she could and then went downstairs to help Bob.

"Breakfast is all ready," said Bob comforting. "Of course you had to have some breakfast, you silly child. The others will be terribly disappointed, but I'll tell them about it, and it just can't be helped."

(Another incident in this clever series will appear here soon.)

Stage Folk Love Nice Audiences

Theatre-goers Often Spoil Their Own Enjoyment, Says Josephine Victor

"THE girl who goes on the stage should always have her family's consent," says Josephine Victor, one of the players in "Just a Woman," which will be seen for the first time in Boston at Ye Wilbur Theatre tonight.

"Leaving out sentimental reasons," says Miss Victor, whose perfect absence of pose marks her as the new generation of actresses who take their work seriously and without frills, "the girl who goes on the stage should always have her family's consent, because stage work is so exceedingly precarious, and for the first few years at least a girl must have a home to go to. Then she should have money to keep her for the first year, just as she would if she were studying in Europe, for during that time she is learning her trade or beginning to anyhow.

"How about the natural born actress?" I have been asked. 'Does she succeed at once, just walk on and do the thing right?' Well, I've been in the company with many of the best representatives of the natural school of acting and I've noticed that there is more technique in their work than in any other kind, but their work is so skilfully covered over that every one thinks it is merely nature.

"After all, to my mind, acting isn't an art; it's a profession into which art enters very greatly, of course. When all is said and done, it is more or less of a commercial proposition.

"After all, it's the so-called commercial actor who gives the public what it wants, and who succeeds because he is constantly working and studying to find out what the public does want, and he has the pulse of the box office to go by.

"Did you ever realize how hard it is for a person who is on the stage to do any studying? There is no great school where I, for instance, could go and study Shakespeare in a class under some eminent exponent of the classic drama. It I pick up Shakespeare in general fencing, not stage fencing, I learn, which is entirely different.

I wonder if audiences realize their effect on the players. An audience can put a damper on an entire performance, especially in musical comedy and in vaudeville. After the first number the singers will come back and say, 'It's a hard audience.' That's enough. From then on the actors work to thaw out the settings and half their efforts go for nothing. They work against tremendous odds and they can't give a good performance.

"The worst fault one can find with the audience, however, is that they will come in late and insist on talking. A whole theatre party comes in after the curtain is up, settles itself with much laughter and hubbub. They read programmes, and then they find that they have missed a good deal of the piece, and the actors hear bits of conversation like this:

"'What's it about?'

"'Why, no, I thought it was a 39.'

"'No, I haven't seen it, but Belle said it was very good!'

"'Who is she?'

"'So sorry I dropped my opera glasses!'

"'What did she say?'

"'I didn't hear that. Why don't they talk louder,' etc., etc.

"It's not very easy to go on with the play when this happens many times," concluded this serious young artist.

"Audiences are much later getting in their seats than they used to be, and often half of the first act cannot be heard for the laughter and chatter. I wish they would remember that their conduct is half of the show."

Miss Josephine Victor, of the "Just a Woman" Company, at Ye Wilbur Theatre.

The Story of "Baby Bollinger"

By H. J. Haiselden, M. D.

CHAPTER XII

Cases [illegible] Harry J. Haiselden

THIS public was not to [illegible] such knowledge as would be the natural result of looking [illegible] Baby Bollinger's case but it was [illegible] important to the [illegible] that it should [illegible] of the fun [illegible] day [illegible]

And now that the Baby Bollinger story has been told from coast to coast in column after column of newspaper matter, some of these age-old puzzles are beginning to be thrashed out. There are symptoms of activity which may result in much-needed legislation. Already it is proposed in Illinois to be asked to pass a law like those in many other States, demanding the sterilization at least of those of criminals who make a practice of attacking small children. The public has been aroused to the belief that it will be better off if some of our degenerates, perverts and defectives are weeded out of the social system, or at least if they are rendered incapable of their indiscretions.

STAMP OUT SEEDS.

If a man has the seeds of murder in his soul, why not stamp them out instead of waiting until murder has been done, and then breaking his neck with a rope or hemp?

Where is another matter that needs attention—the matter of illegal treatment.

Do you know that in Chicago alone there are 3,000 such cases every year? There are all classified as criminal acts. But they are not treated as criminal acts. Punishment is meted out only in those cases which result in death. Then it is called "murder," and there is a great hue and cry for vengeance.

A great many persons have been violently exercised over what Baby Bollinger might have been had he grown to manhood. Some overenthusiastic persons have not stopped short of saying that he would probably have been President of the United States. With his mental weaknesses so apparent, that argument always struck me as being one of the best for allowing him to die. Of course, if by the time he had reached his majority the defectives had increased sufficiently, it might be reasonable to suppose that he could have run quite successfully on the Defective ticket and been elected by a kind [illegible]

But why discuss the [illegible] greatness in one obviously hopeless one when a city permits 3,000 cases of illegal treatment a week? Yet nothing is said of them. No attempt is made to put an end to the practice. And the reason for this is that the public is really not opposed to it.

When such a case succeeds it is a joke. When it fails and death results—then and then only does it become a crime.

TO BLAST PREJUDICE

It is ignorance and prejudice that I hoped to blast with my story of Baby Bollinger.

In our profession it is unfortunately true that the man who discusses his cases in public is regarded as a mountebank. Secrecy cloaks our moves. And under that black crimes are committed—which would not be crimes at all if the light were permitted to stream in. Why is it that a doctor, honest and true and loyal to his profession and conscience, is barred from performing an operation which is performed every year by thousands of money-grubbing, conscienceless knaves—with no interference from the authorities?

The cloak of secrecy should be torn away. It was my purpose to do so, as far as I could with the means given me, through the sad case of Baby Bollinger.

The next move was t— select some medium through which I could inform the world of my intent. I would have to proceed cautiously. I consulted three lawyers and made sure of the law in the case. I was informed that the law could not force me to operate; could not punish me for refraining from the operation. I must leave the door open; if the parents should give way under it a surgical decide that an operation would be best, I was not to prevent it. The law of [illegible] was simple and straightforward enough.

A WARNING NOTE

Everything was ready. I had only to [illegible] one of a thousand means by which such things are carried to the ears of the people. I did not want to have my action lighted by a spectacular glare. And yet I wanted to sound a note that would be heard from coast to coast and arouse the feelings of mankind.

I knew a woman. I knew her to be one of the most sympathetic, broad-minded women I had ever met in my life. She had pity, justice—she had known hardship and ease. She was acquainted with suffering. She was expert in discriminating the complicated emotions of men. From them she sifted the bright and shining truth.

This woman was Miss Florence Patton of the editorial staff of the Chicago Evening American. She was a newspaper woman and would give an honest, straightforward, unbiased account of the exact state of affairs. She would neither hide facts of importance nor add to them for the sake of a "story." She would not exaggerate. She would not belittle. She would not withhold, she would not mutilate. She was a fit person to whom to confide a secret which would startle the world—startle it to sanity, not madness.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Why She Laughed

Several ladies sat in their club a few evenings ago discussing the virtues of their husbands.

"Mr. Bingleton," said one of them, referring to her life partner, "never drinks and never swears—indeed, he has no bad habits."

"Does he never smoke?" someone asked.

"Yes. He likes a cigar just after he has eaten a good meal. But, I suppose, on an average, he doesn't smoke more than once a month."

Some of her friends laughed, but she didn't seem to understand why.

Daily Cooking Suggestion

SQUASH PIE

Two eggs, measuring cup pressed full of egg biscuit, one and one-half cups sugar, one teaspoon salt, one heaping teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon ginger, one can squash, one and one-half quarts milk.

Roll egg biscuit fine and mix with one pint milk. Beat eggs in another dish, add sugar, spices and salt, then squash, beat thoroughly, then add egg biscuit and rest of milk, then strain. Line pie plates with pie crust in usual way and fill. This will make four medium-sized pies.

SAYS REPUBLIC WILL BE OUT TOMORROW

Folks who worried half the day and night because the letter carrier failed to appear on time with John F. Fitzgerald's snappy and popular little weekly newspaper can stop worrying at once. Pitz will have the paper out tomorrow.

The regular publication day of the Republic has for a long time been Saturday, but advance copies were invariably on the desks of Boston editors Friday night, to furnish the text for many a Saturday morning front-page story.

When the Republic for the present week failed to appear the AMERICAN began to receive telephone inquiries from subscribers to the Republic who wondered if anything had gone wrong, or if Editor Fitzgerald had injected his interesting personality into the Curley or anti-Curley campaign, and perhaps was so busy on the stump that he couldn't get the paper out.

Editor Fitz is not interested violently in the present campaign.

The doctor himself explained last night to a reporter for the Boston AMERICAN that the coming issue of his newspaper, without which, he said, no Boston home is what you can call complete, will be the "Christmas" number.

O'Keefe Points Out Danger in 'Waits' Candles

Fire Prevention Commissioner John A. O'Keefe has issued another appeal for the abolishment of the Christmas custom of "Waits," that is, or arranging rows of lighted candles in the windows of homes on Christmas Eve.

"The practice is extremely dangerous," says Mr. O'Keefe, "on account of the liability of setting fire to the window frames or sashes, or to the window draperies or curtains. Some chiefs throughout the district are viewing this practice with growing alarm."

Ralph Adams Cram, who was active in originating the custom on Beacon Hill, whence it has spread through the residential sections, defends the custom and has said: "I know of no case where a fire started from these Christmas candles."

STOCKS LOWER IN LISTLESS MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular at the opening in New York, with the prices lower in the majority of instances. No class showed strength. The market was quiet and purely professional. One comment on the situation is that the public is carrying a large amount of stocks, taken on when the prices were higher, and that large interests, seeking bargains, are trying to tire the public out. At present it is said to be a test of patience between the large operators and an army of small speculators. It is claimed that there will have to be a slump before there can be much of a rise and present trading conditions should prevail for some time.

On the other hand it is asserted that big interests are awaiting the advent of the new year and will then take a bullish initiative. The Austrian situation did not have much influence over the list. Some Boston traders are about bearish, but public sentiment seems to be rather indifferent to the international situation. The improvement of business in the country is getting more into action than anything else. It is the most important thing affecting this country. The New York Central mon sold at a new highest 1915 price, establishing a top for the year. The net after taxes increased $1,706,848. Anglo-French bonds opened at 79 for future delivery, ¼ below Saturday's final quotation, and at the next sale brought 84¾.

PRICE RANGE WAS NARROW.

There was not much range to prices in early trading and declines as well as gains ruled small. It was said that the rally at the end of the week was due to covering of shorts and not from a better appreciation of the prosperity factors which are working for railroads and industrial corporations.

At 10:15 in New York gains included American Sugar ¼, Anaconda ¼, Lackawanna Steel 1, Car and Foundry ¼, Goodrich ¼, Studebaker 1⅛, Mexican Petroleum ¼, Erie ⅛ and New York Central ⅛.

Among declines were Allis-Chalmers ⅜, American Can ⅝, U. S. Steel ⅛, American Locomotive ¼, Baldwin, Brooklyn Rapid Transit ⅝, Westinghouse ⅜, Maxwell ⅛, Union Pacific ⅝, St. Paul ⅜, Southern Pacific ⅝, Reading ⅛, Northern Pacific ⅛, Canadian Pacific ⅛, Baltimore & Ohio ⅛, Chino ¼, and Utah ⅛. Among unchanged issues were Amalgamated Copper, Missouri Pacific, Central Leather, Distillers, General Motors, Republic Iron, Great Northern Ore and Republic Steel.

At the end of half an hour the market was weaker, among issues affected were Distillers, New York Central, Utah Copper, Steel, Baldwin, Pacific, Studebaker, Anaconda, Baldwin, Maxwell, Republic Steel, Westinghouse, Pacific, Petroleum, Reading and Baltimore & Ohio.

BOSTON OPENED WEAK.

The local market was weak as well as dull at the start. There was no breadth to trading and nothing of interest about the list. It receded when New York eased off. Among early declines here were Butte & Superior ½, American Zinc ⅜, Calumet & Arizona ½, United Fruit 1 and Ventura Oil ⅛. Among unchanged issues were Greene-Cananea, North Butte and United Shoe.

There was no change of consequence in the metal market.

LET CONSCIENCE VOTE 'DRY,' SAYS MAJOR SMITH

Major Dan Morgan Smith, manager of the Boston dry campaign, spoke in Pemberton square this noon. It was sort of an introduction to what he will say tonight at Faneuil Hall, where he makes the closing speech of the campaign.

"According to the vote, the price of a vote ranges from 44 cents on a thousand dollars valuation of property to two cents for the poor devil who is supposed not to have any property," he declared. "The good citizen, who is talking increased taxes, is undoubtedly speaking to the Irish Boston voters to blot out their consciences with the dollar. The vote, who are handing out Mr. Noble's pay-day pins for the wets, enclose in the same envelope two cigars.

"The manufacturers of these cigars will gladly sell resent the idea that they can dope a man's conscience.

"After all, the two pleas are identical, each based upon the idea that material welfare is vastly to be considered. The wets say it is essential that the dollar is above the boy; that money is more to be desired than economy; that the single vote cast by a man's pocket can and should drown the voice of conscience.

MORAL VALUES.

"To say that the abolition of the saloon will turn Boston into a 'Barbary Coast' is to insult the intelligence of the community.

"In a resident section, the presence of a saloon benefits only the landlord and the proprietor—it lowers the real estate values of the entire neighborhood.

"This because men, who can afford to live elsewhere, refuse to keep their families in the saloon neighborhood.

"That even the man who owns his own home in a neighborhood where saloons could not obtain the consent of the abutting property owners, is not safe from the presence of the liquor traffic, for the bottle store needs no abutting consent. They may, under the law, be placed in any district in Boston, and within the past few months neighborhoods heretofore free from the blighting curse of alcohol, have had bottle stores put in their midst, over the protests, not only of the very best citizens including the clergy, but over the protest of the very men who vote and, expecting the saloon to be placed in the other fellow's neighborhood.

HAVE KITCHEN BARS NOW.

"The argument that kitchen barrooms flourish only in no-license neighborhoods is refuted by the fact that the latest statistics obtainable, 1911-1914, inclusive, show 435 raids on kitchen barrooms in Boston, and of these there were made in the wettest district of Boston, Roxbury, 29; South Boston, Charlestown and Roxbury. These districts have on an average one licensed place to every 443 people, while there were but seventeen raids in Hyde Plain, Dorchester, West Roxbury and Brighton, where there is an average of only one licensed place to every 2,847 people.

"Seizures were proportionately six times greater in the wet districts.

"Work of the religious, civic, charitable and reform institutions is being constantly undone by the work of the saloon.

"We pay for schools to educate brains, and license saloons to sell liquor that will destroy the brains.

"We build churches to make Christians, and license saloons to sell liquor that changes Christians into savages.

"We give to charity to support the persons made needy by the liquor sold in the saloons we license.

"We build penitentiaries to incarcerate the victims of the liquor sold in the saloons that we license, and what do we get out of it? Sixty-six cents taxes on a thousand dollars' valuation. What does it cost us? No man knows.

"The cost cannot be counted in dollars and cents, although we know the cost is far in excess of the taxes received.

"But the misery, the shame, the crime, the suffering and the damnation are the expression in figures.

"Let your conscience vote tomorrow!"

German Post Is Taken by Russians

By International News aService.

Berlin, Dec. 13.—Today's official war report says:

"At several places there have been minor engagements between our advanced posts and Russian reconnoitering patrols.

"The Russians succeeded in taking an unimportant German post. The Russian attack near Vulka, south of Lake Vygonovskiye, failed. The Russians lost about 100 in killed and wounded."

Train Collision in Utica Snow Storm

Utica, N. Y., Dec. 13.—In a blinding snow storm that swirled across the city early today, a heavy mail train crashed into the rear of the second section of an eastbound passenger train in the New York Central yards. Several clerks on the mail train were hurt, car windows were smashed, the length of both trains and passengers in the forward train were thrown from their berths.

Gossip of the State House

Councillor Daniel E. Denny of Worcester—his term expires this year and he retires to private life—has been quoted as saying that he, too, would vote against the confirmation of any of the Governor's appointments.

Mr. Denny indignantly denies it.

Anyway, Mr. Denny voted against the confirmation of Charles F. W. Archer of Salem, whose name was sent in by the Governor as Deputy Commissioner of State Aid and Pensions. He conducted a campaign to get the post for a Grand Army veteran.

Despite the fact that the Council has a moral right to trouble itself only with the three appointees named by the Governor—not of a person not named by the Governor—Denny prevented confirmation of Mr. Archer by the Council.

Governor Walsh promptly withdrew this appointment and sent in Mr. Archer's name for the Efficiency and Economy Commission, which pays $1,700 a year more than the other position, and the council, including Denny, promptly confirmed him.

Denny, whose war record is a matter of considerable dispute, aspires to be commander of the Massachusetts Department, G. A. R.

Dangled in the air between two sets of rival architects and contractors, the State Board of Insanity has decided over four months the award of the architectural battle for the new state hospital proposed to be erected at Waltham. Evidently the board is no nearer to a decision than when the matter was submitted, unless it can be said that it objects to receive advantage from advice proffered by the new board of incoming administration.

The last Legislature appropriated a sum sufficient for the architectural plans for the new hospital. The award of this contract, it is expected, will benefit not only the architect but the aspiring contractors. Hence, the rivalry was keen, so keen that politicians holding appointive offices have used their influence to force the award to one firm or the other.

Governor Walsh heard of the situation and called an officer of the Insanity Board to his office. He advised him that the reputation of the Insanity Board might be dashed a murky color unless the contract were immediately awarded. The Governor advised him to award the bid by competition and not to limit the number of competitors.

That was before election. The contract is not awarded.

Roger Sherman Hoar of Edgartown has made a mental bet with himself. He bet himself that he wouldn't dare to wear a "Votes for Women" button until the women actually get the vote in this State. He took the bet and he is wearing the button.

As evidence of his sincerity in the cause, Mr. Hoar places the button on the lapel of every coat he wears, even on the dress suit coat to his full-dress at the opera.

Mayor Curley Has Given the Council NO CHANCE to Co-operate with Him for the Good of Boston

MR. CURLEY has at last discovered that wild abuse of Messrs. Kenny, Collins and Attridge, the citizens' candidates for the City Council, is only helping to lower him still farther in the estimation of the people of Boston. Therefore he has changed his tactics, which he can readily do at any time.

So NOW he has caused to be displayed on big and expensive billboards the charge that these gentlemen in the City Council refused to co-operate with him in the CONSTRUCTIVE DEVELOPMENT of the city of Boston. Indeed!!

It would take a microscope to find any constructive work which Mayor Curley has inaugurated or SERIOUSLY ATTEMPTED to inaugurate in the city of Boston since he became Mayor. His methods of economy at the expense of other people with small wages and little salaries were certainly not items in a program of CONSTRUCTIVE DEVELOPMENT of Boston. His strange and wonderful proposal to sell the Public Garden and thereby to advertise to the world that Boston was bankrupt, in money, taste and common sense, was certainly not any part of a constructive program. His attempt to foist upon the city of Boston a contract with the Electric Lighting Company which would have prevented the city for ten years from obtaining a reduction in the cost of her electric lighting - a contract which every intelligent man who studied the question knew meant a loss to the city of hundreds of thousands of dollars—was no part of any constructive program for Boston.

Now it happens that these gentlemen, Messrs. Kenny, Attridge and Collins, were members of the City Council, and Mr. Storrow was a member of the School Committee, when John F. Fitzgerald was Mayor of Boston and they thus were able to GIVE PROOF of their willingness and ability to co-operate with a constructive administration. Mayor Fitzgerald never complained of the attitude of these gentlemen when they were in the City Council and he was Mayor. The Boston AMERICAN was able to support both Mayor Fitzgerald and these gentlemen at the same time, because they DID co-operate with Mayor Fitzgerald in the most constructive administration which the city of Boston ever had.

It was during Mayor Fitzgerald's term of office, and while these gentlemen were co-operating with him, that Boston made her greatest strides in her development toward a metropolitan city and in the development of her social functions and the power to utilize the united strength and resources of the people, to their joint benefit. Boston, under the leadership of Fitzgerald, Kenny, Collins and Attridge, came nearer to becoming a modern city, such as the Germans have developed and which has put Germany in the forefront of the nations in the power of her people and in their leadership both industrially and intellectually.

But these gentlemen of the citizens' ticket have not been ABLE to co-operate with Mayor Curley in the interest of the city. They could not co-operate with him in his proposal to sell the Public Garden. They could not co-operate with him in his attempt to reduce the wages of firemen and policemen and thus make our protectors a discontented and inefficient body.

They could not co-operate with him in his attempts, under the leadership of John A. Sullivan, to destroy the efficiency of the Street Department by reductions in wages. They could not co-operate with him in his attempt to turn back the hand of the clock of progress in Boston by closing the gymnasia, discharging the citizens, abandoning the public concerts and permitting the public parks and pleasure grounds to run down.

They could not co-operate with him when he and John A. Sullivan undertook to give the Electric Light Company a contract which meant an enormous loss in money to the citizens of Boston.

They could not co-operate with Mayor Curley when, at the very time he was discharging some of the city employes and reducing the salaries of others, he put his brother John into a five thousand dollar job and DID NOT REDUCE his salary. They could not co-operate with him when he took John A. Sullivan from the Finance Commission, where he had some experience, and put him at the head of the Law Department, where he had no experience and who, in his last notorious law case, in the police court in Roxbury, as counsel for an express company, tried to have sent to prison a poor fellow who had stolen a loaf of bread from an express wagon; and when the judge, who was more humane and red blooded than Mr. Sullivan, refused to put the man in prison, Mr. Sullivan, forgetting his duty as a lawyer, became insulting and was fined by the judge.

Messrs. Kenny, Collins and Attridge could not co-operate with Mayor Curley when he sold a perfectly good automobile, attached to the Mayor's office, for seven hundred dollars and bought an expensive limousine for the purpose of social display, at a price which no salary which he ever earned in any known private business would have permitted him to see even with a telescope.

They could not co-operate with him when he attempted to raise the tax rate of Boston two dollars and throw real estate values into a helpless jumble and confusion, a proposition which met with unanimous protest from the business men and the house owners of the city.

These gentlemen DID NOT CO-OPERATE WITH MAYOR CURLEY, BECAUSE HE DID NOT GIVE THEM A CHANCE.

The Boston AMERICAN has not been able to co-operate with Mayor Curley for the same reason that Kenny, Storrow, Collins and Attridge could not co-operate with him. Yet the Boston AMERICAN co-operated with and supported ex-Mayor Fitzgerald during the entire four years of his administration. And this newspaper was also able to co-operate with and to support Governor Walsh during the entire three years in which he was Lieutenant-Governor and Governor.

Why? Need anybody ask? What a contrast between the administration of State affairs by David I. Walsh and the administration of city affairs by James M. Curley!

A Double Standard of Common Sense

By Helen Ring Robinson

IN a decision of the United States Supreme Court, where the case fell under the Mann White Slave act, Justice Holmes recommended that we Americans stop muddling about in a mess of mush-and-sorghum sentimentalities.

He did not, to be sure, use just that expression, which is, perhaps, a poor one—but my own—employing, instead, suave legal phraseology about abandoning "the illusion that the woman is always the victim" in such a situation as was then under review.

That situation, be it understood, had nothing to do with "White Slavery" in the true sense of that much abused term. There was no question of kidnaping little girls, of entrapping innocent young women for immoral purposes—a loathly industry which still has its well-defined American centres, whatever twiddling "Investigators" for smug "Foundations" may say to the contrary.

Men or women found guilty of that cancerous traffic should be given a life sentence to the penitentiary for a crime whose mere mention forces me to dip my pen into a disinfectant before proceeding to a further discussion of Justice Holmes' remark.

The case occasioning that remark bore some points of resemblance to a celebrated trial I once attended, where a woman of thirty—with some fourteen years' experience in disposing of herself at the highest market value—was involved with a man of sixty-eight, recently risen from frugal circumstances to great wealth.

Out of the welter of wantonness disclosed by the trial one fact plainly emerged. The man—not the woman—had "been transported from State to State in violation of the Mann White Slave act." The man—not the woman — was the victim. Not an "innocent victim" to be sure. He had been entangled because the bad in his nature had gone out to meet the bad in her; but he was none-the-less, the real victim.

Yet the woman's lawyer drew tears from the eyes of sexey sentimentalists as he tremoloed well-worn and most inept sayings about "betrayed and trusting young girls;" and the jury nodded in sadly sympathetic muddlement.

So the woman was set free; one of the jurymen explaining to me afterward that the verdict was rendered "in defence of betrayed womanhood."

There was an edge of masculine complacency about the remark, an echo from the man-made centuries when woman was looked upon as a defenceless chattel.

And there is, doubtless, some vestige of the same complacency about the average man today which makes him yield to what Justice Holmes calls "the illusion that the woman is always the victim" his sex pride recoiling instinctively from any other assumption.

But surely women leaders in the Feminist movement should not yield as some do, to this persistent misrepresentation of life.

For if the woman is, indeed, "always the victim" then it must be granted that she is hopelessly subordinate to man. But we know this is not true. We know, however it may once have been, the woman of today, quite as truly as the man, may say "I choose."

It was male ascendency which established a double standard of morality for men and women, and women acknowledged their own inferiority when they consented to that double standard.

With the rise of the Feminist movement, however, has come the righteous demand for that single standard of morality which can only be established by recognising the approaching equality of the sexes.

And here is the place to warn Feminist leaders—in the light of Justice Holmes' remark—that they can never cure the world of the ills resulting from a double standard of morality by substituting a double standard of common sense.

The Dunes

By Jane McLean

SEA waves that fluttering, muttering in, stretch forth your longing hands
And clutch with wavering eagerness the yellow of the sands;
You hold a magic of your own that no one understands.

Sand dunes, you breathe the wild salt breath that savors of the sea;
He storms your very portals, for a lover wild is he,
A-clamoring at your heart strings as he strives to set you free.

Perhaps his turbulent love song has awaked you to rejoice;
Perhaps you tremble at his touch nor draw away through choice,
And thrill like any maiden at the music of his voice.

This Talk Is Meant Only for the Kindheart Family

THIS talk is meant for you men who have a good deal of money and who are kind-hearted as well as successful.

Before you read any farther take a good look at the cartoon here. Don't just glance at it. Study it and let it sink into your heart.

Look at these two poor little youngsters. Just think how sorrowful life must be to them on Christmas Day, when you and your folks are so happy—Christmas Day, when everybody ought to be happy.

Now, you can't help it that these children and thousands upon thousands like them are poor. But you CAN help some of them to have one happy day that they will remember as long as they live. And you can do it so easily, Mr. Kindheart—just by a scratch of the pen.

A check for a hundred won't make even a dent in your bank account. You will never miss it. It's a mere bagatelle to you.

And with a check for $100 you can make fifty happy Christmases for fifty poor families.

Never mind about the grammar of that sentence. We are not trying to write something pretty. We are trying to talk to your heart and put compassion in it for the poor little children. Yes, sir, we want a $100 check from you, Mr. Kindheart, and from you, Mrs. Kindheart, and from you, Miss Kindheart—and we want each check so that fifty poor families can have fifty happy Christmases.

This newspaper pays every cent of the cost of investigating cases of want and the cost of distributing the Christmas baskets, and if you send us a check for $100, then exactly $100 worth of food will go to make the Christmas Day happy in fifty homes that are very poor, and where the poor kiddies haven't a chance on earth to get anything on Christmas unless YOU give it to them.

Mr. Kindheart, it would make tears come to your eyes if you knew how sad Christmas is to thousands of poor little boys and girls.

Do write a check and send it to our Christmas Basket Fund. It's only a scratch of the pen to you, maybe. But it is wonderful happiness to many little creatures whose lives are mostly very sad, poor things!

And, Mr. Kindheart, when you sit down to your own beautifully appointed Christmas dinner the thought that fifty humble homes are as happy as happy can be at that very minute because of your bounty will make your own dinner about the most corkingly bully dinner you ever ate.

Send the Christmas Basket Fund a $100 check today, won't you?

More Truth Than Poetry

The Candid Candidate

THEY said to Colonel Windeigh: "We party leaders feel
That your well-known abilities will make a wide appeal.
Your hand is on the public pulse, you know its every need;
Your life has been an open book that he who runs may read.
We're gathered here to ask you, sir, to run for President."
And this is what the Colonel said: And this is what he meant:

"YOU overrate my statesmanship;
This honor is too great.
I really am not qualified
To be your candidate.
I haven't the experience
With serious affairs;
I lack the strength to carry such
A weighty load of cares.
With all my heart I thank you, sirs,
But won't you pass me by
And give this splendid honor to
A worthier man that I?"

"IT does your judgment credit, sirs,
That you should come to me;
I'm just the man the party needs
To be its nominee.
I know just what the country wants;
I scarcely need to add
I'll make the greatest President
The country ever had.
If you'd had sense you'd given me
This honor in the past,
But I won't quarrel with you for that;

At Last

The American Locomotive Company spent $19,431 last year for cigars. Evidently the high price of coal has inspired engineers to find a use for Connecticut tobacco.

Unsportsmanlike

We admit the value to the public health of swatting the fly during his Winter's sleep, but it seems like a mean trick.

Merely a Matter of Habit

Wood as an article of diet will have no terrors for the Germans. Haven't they been eating pumpernickel for hundreds of years?

Astounding!

What Bryan cannot understand about Henry Ford is how Henry can bear to spend all that money.

What Do They Mean—"Quietly"?

This story that Roosevelt is quietly gathering 15,000 men will not be credited by any one who heard him getting the Rough Riders together.

Without Prejudice

However, let it be distinctly understood that Justice Hughes hasn't forbidden any other State organizations to nominate him for President.

Safety First

The Lure of Gold

A lot of war brides have left their early loves and skipped out with wealthier men.
